You adjust the shock absorbers to the changing road by flicking a switch on the new Rolls-Royce and Bentley

A brain-box that is polished with ground oat husks; cadmium-plated cotter pins; a walnut-trimmed interior that unites utter silence with the luxurious smell of leather—such are the tremendous trifles that make the Rolls-Royce so coveted at $15,655.

THE Rolls-Royce and its fraternal twin, the Bentley, are designed for people who are determined to live well while in transit. There are few reasonable desires which the owner cannot satisfy by pressing a button, pulling a lever, or flicking a switch.

For example, if the road surface is not to your liking, you can, in effect, change it. A switch on the steering column lets you adjust the shock absorbers to suit driving conditions. You harden or soften the ride at will.

"Rough roads pass almost unnoticed," writes Gordon Wilkins, motoring correspondent of The Observer, "for they neither shock the occupants nor assail their ears with drumming noises."

If the noise from other cars distresses you, you can close the windows and still get fresh air through an efficient ventilating system. Within your Rolls-Royce, blessed silence reigns. You can converse in discreet whispers.

Three walnut picnic tables are among the graces of the Rolls-Royce and Bentley. One slides out from the dash—an ideal place for a road map. Two others fold down behind the front seats. They make fine work surfaces upon which the children can rest their coloring books to keep them quietly amused on long trips.

The rake of the front seats is individually adjustable. The driver can sit erect for a commanding view of the road while his companion reclines. Each has his own set of arm-rests which adjust to suit his fancy.

The seats are as cozy as club chairs. You nestle into them. They are covered with the same English leather used on seats in the House of Commons. Eight hides are used—enough to make 128 pairs of shoes.

There are two illuminated vanity mirrors in niches in the rear quarters of the Rolls-Royce. Ladies may thus perfect their make-up in privacy before leaving the car.

Here you see the rear window defroster. Or, rather, you do not see it. It consists of a heating element of 1,360 nearly invisible wires moulded into the glass—wires finer than a human hair. At the flick of a switch, mist and frost are cleared electrically.

Much of the interior is surfaced with French walnut which has been hand-polished by English craftsmen. Notes are made on the hue and burl of the walnut used in each car, and are filed under your serial number. If a portion of the wood should ever be damaged, it can be matched flawlessly in grain and finish.

The Rolls-Royce Silver Cloud II—$15,655 P.O.E.

The gas tank cannot be opened without the driver's consent. You unlock it electrically from a button on the dash. And you should never run out of gas. A green light on the instrument panel starts winking when your supply dwindles to the last three gallons.

Your luggage rides here in carpeted seclusion. It can never be soiled by the spare wheel, which occupies a separate compartment under the luggage. You can test the air pressure in the spare through a special port without removing the tire.

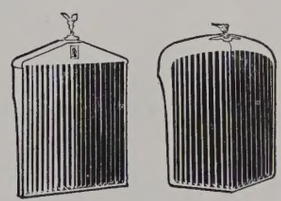
Under a hatch in the wheel compartment you will find an assortment of cadmium-plated tools and replacement bulbs. They rest in a fitted case of sponge rubber—further evidence of Rolls-Royce's obsession with peace and quiet.

Corrosion is held at bay by a plating of chromium or cadmium on every nut, bolt, washer and cotter pin. Even the tail pipe is chromed.

A dictating machine, an Espresso coffee maker, an electric razor, a bed, a telephone, and water for washing are available as optional extra conveniences.

The basic convenience of the Rolls-Royce is, of course, its magnificent riding qualities. Even at 100 m.p.h. (laws permitting) you have a feeling of sublime safety. Yet the 4700-pound car is delicately maneuverable.

The power-assisted steering is, according to Robert Glenton in the Sunday Express, "as delicate as the plop of a pearl into a glass of champagne. . . ." The power brakes will halt the car squarely from 100 m.p.h. without a tremor. And there are three independent brake linkages—two hydraulic and one mechanical. In the unlikely event that one linkage should fail, the others automatically keep the car under perfect control.



Here you see the only difference between the Rolls-Royce and the Bentley — their radiator design. In all other respects they are identical motor cars. The Bentley costs $300 less because its radiator is simpler to make.

If you would like more information, write Rolls-Royce, Inc., 45 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20. If you are interested in taking a demonstration drive in a Rolls-Royce or Bentley, get in touch with the dealer listed below.

Tomorrow . . . point it to the sun

When you've changed into something light and casual, driving down to meet summer halfway, you'll notice a change in your Imperial, too.

The Imperial you've known all winter long as an elegant, urbane, urban car is now a practical cross-country traveler.

Imperial is the year-in, year-out choice of experts who judge a car on its roadability. Long, long distances are little challenge to Imperial travelers. You'll add an extra hundred or so easy, restful miles to each leg of your jaunt to sun country . . . because Imperial's unique steering and torsion-bar suspension, its deep foam-padded seats, its magnificent roominess block out fatigue and restlessness.

And if your Imperial has Auto-Pilot, you can travel mile after mile, up hill and down, at a constant speed, without so much as a touch on the accelerator.

You'll note, too, that doormen, bell captains and maitres de seem a bit more helpful when you arrive in an Imperial.

First, see your Imperial dealer . . . then, go find your private share of summer somewhere far away.

Aboard Solution Racing to Nassau

By FRANK ROHR

A RECORD 43-BOAT FLEET gathered for the start of the twenty-third annual Miami-Nassau Ocean race last January thirtieth ranging from the delicate 32-foot yawl, Feather II, to the 72-foot scratch boat, clipper-bowed Ticonderoga. We were nine on board the 46-foot sloop Solution, owned and skippered by Thor Ramsing of Greenwich, Conn., for many years, a Palm Beach Winter resident.

It was a glittering northerly day. A bagfull of 25 mph NE winds was ruffling the Gulf Stream and sending a warmup series of short blue seas cresting smartly against the Class A topsides as we all maneuvered for a good start under the bows of the U. S. Coast Guard cutter, Androscoggin. The entire crew was on deck, cloaked in oilskins that soon were streaming with warm sea water. We'd set the full main and Genoa jib and were getting the feel of the boat, winching home the runners and sheeting in the big headsail as Thor tacked her back and forth over the line.

It was to be a 5 p. m. start, with classes B and C shoving off at 15-minute intervals. With 15 seconds left to the starting gun, we tacked to Thor's last command of "Ready about" and came reaching towards the line on the port tack along with Hilaria, Ondine, Ciclon and a host of others.

Suddenly, a few boatlengths to windward, the giant shape of Ticonderoga came barging down the line reaching way off the wind, her decks half-hidden behind a cloud of sail.

A strident "Come up, Ti, come up," and other more censorable cries of warning from Solution turned her from our right-of-way just in time. We fell off perforce, our bows scraping the air under Ti's counter, and then we were over and seconds later, bang on course for our first Bahamian marker, Great Isaac Light, lee-bowing the current and going to windward like a train of cars. This leg was to be 67 miles long.

We cranked in the Genoa sheets and set ourselves on the weather rail as Thor held Solution to the course of 085 degrees. Her powerful bows began to hammer through the rising seas, flinging back a good portion of them at the braced crew, and the kenyon log wound up to a steady 8.5 knots.

The late afternoon sun was glinting over the lacy Gulf Stream hills as we dropped the white towers of Miami Beach astern and approached the Stream's axis, where the racing current has been clocked at almost 6 knots. Seas here made up steeply and with plenty of force against the northeasterly winds that were gusting up to 35 mph. We could still see Ondine and big Ti hull down ahead. It kept breezing on, and now Solution put her lee rail down with a will and began steadily ploughing the Stream with her leeward life rail stanchions.

"I think we' better tie in a double reef," said Thor Ramsing from the wheel where he'd been since the start. With Navigator Bill Quinby of Greenwich at the clew and Solution's professional skipper, John Olsen, at the tack, we took a double reef. The boat, which had been laboring, stood up gratefully. But she still kept shipping enough green water in the belly of the big jib for us to hand that sail soon afterwards and set the number two Genoa.

With the wind veering gradually ENE, we were able to ease sheets a bit and were making knots towards Great Isaac Light. Overhead, a few trade wind clouds were skittering across an indigo evening sky. Then, at 1830, half an hour after we'd set the number two Genoa, the stitching went in that sail with a noise like a building falling. The watch on deck hustled forward to take in the tatters and set the working jib. With this rig, we settled down to a leap-frogging 7.5-knot ride and continued so through the night.

Towards 7 p. m., Thor relinquished the helm, set the four-on four-off night watch and went below with the off-duty section. With him were Motor Boating magazine's seagoing editor, Ev Morris; eagle-eyed Frank Duffy of Ft. Lauderdale; and Dick Coulson of New York. On deck were Ed Raymond of Rowayton, Conn.; Jack Latham of New York, and myself.

Dusk was brief and evening early and brilliant with the full moon sailing from some secret harbor in the archipelago of cloud that obscured the eastern sky over Grand Bahama Island. From below came the homey smell of Dinty Moore's beef stew being prepared by John Olsen. Could I get it down?

I settled instead for fruit juice and oatmeal cookies, and watched the cold moon soar over the masthead lights of our competition ahead and not too far astern while Ed, Jack, and I tended sheets and traded wheel watches on the bumpy road to Great Isaac.

Before the watch change at 11, Bill Quinby came up to identify Great Isaac Light, whose loom came up obediently dead ahead of us. At the change, our watch went below to a cabin crazily askew. Weather bunks were barricaded with lee boards and cushions, and main cabin lee bunks were barely accessible behind the saloon table. But John Olsen had produced the minor miracle of hot cocoa on his frail two-burner stove below the main ladder, and it made the hour very pleasant.

"I relieve you down below, by God," said Ev Morris to me as I came down a few moments in advance to wrap myself around a cup of cocoa. And armored in foul weather gear, he and his section went on deck to round Great Isaac. Skipper Ramsing, navigator Quinby and chief stalwart Olsen were on steady call and slept when possible.

I dove into a lee bunk, drifting off almost at once to the comforting obligato of winch noises and shouts of "ready about" as the other watch tacked to clear Great Isaac and NE Rock. We all slept like babes and woke for our 3 a. m. watch with the familiar first night taste of dry kleenex in our mouths—and no amount of sour balls, oatmeal cookies chiclets and especially dramamine will undo it faster than just another day at sea. We came on deck to find the wind gradually veering in its classic clockwise fashion and Solution still fairly close-hauled.

Frank Rohr

On the sunny homeward leg of the Nassau Cup Race, Martha Ramsing, the skipper's wife, puts protective sun tan oil on Thor Ramsing's back as he guides his 46-foot sloop, Solution, towards the finish line. Facing them, from the left, are sailmaker Ed Raymond and Motor Boating editor, Ev. Morris.

Soundlessly, Ed Raymond took the helm while Jack Latham and I checked sheets and the set of the jib and then sat up on the weather side, trying to keep in the warmth of our watch below, and grew slowly accustomed to the night's new face. In the west, the full moon's silver circle, buffeted by the NE wind, sailed through a ragged slot in the cloud rack and shone coldly down on our uncomfortable cockpit. Seas kept smashing at our bows as if the Gulf Stream had taken up subversive residence in the Bahamas. And so we cantered down the channel, raising 7.5 knots on the kenyon. At 4 a. m. we were able to shake the reef.

Dawn came modestly, trailing clouds of beige and rose over the lumpy blue waters of Northwest Providence Channel. But there was nothing modest about John Olsen's breakfast when the watch was relieved at 7 a.m. Orange juice, scrambled eggs, sausage, coffee and sweet rolls—sweet fare for awakened appetites.

By noon, Frank Duffy had spied the distinctive shape of our second marker, Great Stirrup Light, at the northeastern tip of the Berry Islands, 62 miles from Great Isaac and only 55 miles from Nassau. We were all on deck now. The wind had continued to veer and we were close-hauled. But decks were partially dry, and as we tacked towards the lonely little brown shapes of the Berrys, the sandy Bahamian bottom shone up through lessening sky-blue seas and occasional coral heads swept by like cloud shadows beneath the surface.

"Once more around the barn of Great Stirrup," said Ed Raymond about 2:30 that afternoon, "and we'll be able to lay Nassau." When Thor came on deck with the morning watch, he'd handed the small working jib and set our big Genoa again, and Solution was reeling off knots like the seasoned racer she was. Smoother seas came travelling from the southeast now, and we were able to peel off foul weather jackets and enjoy a luncheon of iced beer and three-decker sandwiches. By 3 p.m. we were reaching down to New Providence Island on an easterly breeze. One by one, we dropped the Berrys astern to starboard and by nightfall, we were heeled in the quietest waters of the trip.

"At this rate, we'll be in before 9 p.m.," predicted Bill Quinby, and Solution was as good as his word. Sunset and the loom of Nassau came together this night; then red harbor lights and rising stars and the marvelous odors of John's fried filet of sole rising from below decks. Our watch joined the others on deck after dinner. From left to right across our bow, the lights of Nassau bloomed from the sea. In the east, an overripe moon left her windy warm berth of waters and headed for the zenith, laying a silver track down from the horizon to Solution's topsides and beyond us, westward. Sliding through calmer seas with the wind still high, we fled along towards Nassau with started sheets at an easy 8 knots. Up on the weather rail, Ev Morris said to the next man, "Well, this is what you came for, isn't it?"

By 8 p.m., we were close enough to see the steady shape of the land on the moving waters as we made for the bright familiar flash of Hog Island Lighthouse. From the dark gulf to the harbor, a pilot boat detached itself and came to meet Solution as Thor held her up just to port of the lighted entrance buoys. The stern was fired with light as Bill Quinby touched off the traditional finish line flare. There was Thor standing at the wheel and Ev Morris and Ed Raymond at the main and jib sheet winches as Solution rode across the line under the stern of the committee boat, between Con Roca and the Nassau Harbor Light. It was 8:33 p.m.

Shouts of "Name, please" mixed with "Ready about" as we turned into the wind. We dropped the sails and motored slowly past the British Colonial, beyond the Prince George with its twinkling harborside restaurant and up to an inside berth at the steady docks of Yachthaven. Our mooring lines went over; news photographers flashed their welcoming bulbs; around us sounds of calypso music and singing came from the decks of the early finishers. The race was over; the celebrations just beginning.

When the smoke cleared, it was seen that the 40-foot yawl, Paper Tiger, owned by Jack Powell of St. Petersburg had topped the fleet in addition to taking Class C honors with a corrected time of 20:58:15. Second place overall went to Class A winner, Hugh Schaddelee's 55 foot yawl, Hilaria of Fort Lauderdale with a corrected time of 21:55:26. Ted Hood's new 40-foot yawl, Robin won third place and Class B in 22:14:59. Fun, a 39-foot cutter owned by Lee Loomis and Bus Mosbacher Jr., took fourth in 22:29:21.

Second in Class A was Huey Long's 57-foot yawl, Ondine, in 22:30:03; Ciclon with 22:58:56 took third and good old Ti came in fourth in 23:12:34. On Solution, we'd finished a respectable seventh in the 17-boat Class A fleet, saving our time on Tigress and Meridian with an adjusted count of 23:44:57.

Friday's 30-mile Nassau Cup Race, February third, the final 1961 SORC contest, was a real gift from the sea. There were brisk reaching winds of 15 knots, smooth turquoise seas outside the Hog Island starting mark, and a Bahamian sky of flawless blue with a perfect tanning sun overall.

With the skipper's and navigator's wives on board to bring us luck, we kept Solution well up among the leaders over the windward-leeward course out to Booby Rocks and back, finishing ninth in Class A in 4:00:21 corrected. Bib Ti, a reaching demon, finished first. But John Hershey's 44-foot yawl, Ca Va II, made the distance in 3:47:37 corrected to win the contest.

Final tallying that day by Southern yachting statisticians awarded the 1961 SORC championship and Governor of Florida Trophy to Miami-Nassau victor, Paper Tiger, with a point total of 292.5. Second place in the SORC derby was taken by Fun; third by Huey Long's Ondine.

The Southern racing circuit is far from closed, however. At this writing, there's a flood tide of interest in the inaugural Miami-Jamaica race, scheduled to start March eighteenth.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

By HENRY O. DORMANN

El Morocco's new kingdom, just a few blocks away, opened to a gala night hosted by John Perona. The new El Morocco looks like a technicolor, cinemascope version of the old one. All the things there, the zebra stripes, palms, venetian lanterns, twinkling stars, electric blue walls, everything was unchanged, it was only bigger and spanking new. Added also is a small automatic elevator in the foyer which whisks the ladies to the powder room upstairs. This is an added attraction, permitting them to make a grand entrance down the thick carpeted, wide stairway to the main dining room. To those who prefer more privacy, the bar and red velvet Champagne Room upstairs is just the thing. The dance floor, designed to be small, was set further down in the room, making a very small "Siberia" section, a place which has always been a social exile to El Moroccolites.

The gala opening was by invitation only. There, of course, was no show at El Morocco, but the drinking and dancing attendees were a show in themselves. Hope Hampton, who opened El Morocco many years ago and closed the old one, was there in a million-sequinned dress. Porfirio Rubirosa sat beside his actress bride Odile Rodin. Frank and Lisette Hunter were among those at John Perona's roundtable.

Byron Foy, Gertrude Astor, the Warren Pershings, Huntington Hartford, Drue Heinz, the Denniston Slaters and Howard Oxenberg and his bride, Princess Elizabeth of Yugoslavia, were in the glittering throng.

Also attending were Mr. and Mrs. Serge Semenenko, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ittelson, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Goulandris and Billy Rose with Joyce Mathews, and Salvador Dali. Surprisingly enough, show business was sparsely represented — the only ones turning out being Jack Lemmon, Henry Fonda, Otto Premminger, Hermione Gingold and Constance Carpenter. The El Morocco faithful, Beth Leary, a steady patron since its humble beginnings, presided at a table that came close to being located where her favorite table had been in the old El Morocco. With her were Eve Lehman and Orrin Lehman, Vincent Dougherty of the FBI and Baron Stukart.

Just to put the luxury minded ladies in the proper spirit, in the upstairs foyer are four showcases exhibiting the choicest jeweled wares from the houses of Rome's Bulgari and Manhattan's Cartier, Van Cleef and Arpels and David Webb.

At 1:00 o'clock in the morning, a bus drew up outside El Morocco to take a chosen few for a week-end safari to the whitest up-state New York resort. There wasn't time to change, so the formal first-nighters got aboard the bus equipped with a bar and a guitar-player to make the three hours go faster. The cocktail party on wheels rolled through the night to Hunter Ski Bowl in Greene County in the Catskills, where the snow drifts looked waist deep and the mercury flirted with zero. Like a good monk in an Alpine monastery, owner Jimmy Hammerstein, stage-director son of the late, great librettist Oscar Hammerstein, awaited with hot coffee and a warming fire. Here, two years ago, Jimmy and ex-dancer Phil Gerard, answered a newspaper ad offering Hunter Mountain for a dollar to anyone who would develop it. Up until then, the tiny town of Hunter (Summer pop. 5,000) was content to hibernate in the Winter time (pop. 500). Six thousand dollars, and many heartaches later, Hunter Mountain ski bowl is a thriving reality for New Yorkers with a special appeal to Jimmy's many friends among the theatrical set. If Hunter itself isn't exactly St. Moritz, at least it's a minor American Gothic Gstaad.

Next day, such avid disciples of the slippery slopes as Pat Munsel, mate Bob Schuler, Susan Fonda, Stanley Rumbough Jr., Dick Cowell, Louise Santry, Denny Slater and Marion Javits slalomed to their hearts' content. Although Howard Oxenberg and his bride, Princess Elizabeth of Yugoslavia, actually met last season in the Austrian ski resort of St. Anton, neither had ever seen the other ski before. The verdict was mutual admiration as usual.

The second Global Gala drew such distinguished world-minded citizens as Henry Cabot Lodge, Ralph Bunche and Robert Murphy to The Plaza to aid the Institute of International Education. This is the service organization which, since its inception forty-two years ago, has provided opportunities for thousands of students, teachers, and professional people from almost every country extant to study and train in lands other than their town. The IIE, which began in 1919 with a staff of three and a borrowed typewriter, has grown so large the trustees are planning a magnificent new $4,500,000 Center for International Exchange on United Nations Plaza.

Mrs. Arthur Houghton Jr. and Mrs. Edward M. M. Warburg, who co-chairmaned the affair, invited as honored guests some forty Fulbright exchange students from such far-flung cultures as Japan, Somaliland and Ecuador. We danced with a pretty Belgian student of tropical medicine, Dr. Marianne Dumont, whose father is the sole remaining physician in an 800-bed hospital in Elizabethville in the Congo.

Those two adorable zanies, Betty Comden and Adolph Green, really did get carried away as their song goes, in their hilarious cavalcade from Village Vanguard days almost to "Do-Re-Mi." And Meyer Davis played again that inaugural dedication number, "Jacqueline."

As far as the decorations were concerned, The Plaza's Grand Ballroom was decorated with globes. There was a globe on each of the tables, covered with blue cloths and lighted by blue candles and silver candlesticks. Larger globes were on each side of the stage which held the orchestra.

A feature of the program was the presentation of Mrs. John H. G. Pell, a member of the ball committee, wearing the famous Napolean necklace of diamonds, recently acquired by Harry Winston, Inc., a ball sponsor, along with Englehard Industries, Inc. and Schenley Industries, Inc., which donated the liquors and wines for the fete.

The Napoleon necklace is from the collection of Empress Marie Louise, wife of the French Emperor. She received it from her mother, Queen Maria Theresa of Austria. In succession, ownership of the necklace came down, through Archduke Max of Austria, to the House of Lichtenstein. In 1948 it was bought by the French collector who recently sold it.

The guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Reginald T. Townsend, Mrs. Peter M. Brown, Mr. Theodore B. Conklin Jr., and Mr. Beverly Chew Barstow.

Many cocktail parties at the Plaza and in private homes preceded the fete. Hosts and hostesses were Eugene Van Ness, president of the society, and Mrs. Van Ness, the Rev. There was a breath of Spring in New York despite the snows that fell recently. The Sixth Annual Viennese Opera Ball at the Waldorf-Astoria had as its theme "The Festival of Vienna," a springtime celebration in the Old World capital.

The gaiety of the still-approaching season was captured, however, by guests who attended the ball benefitting Columbia University's Margit Bokor Memorial Fund for cancer research. Red and white carnations decorated the huge chandelier in the Waldorf's grand ballroom. The tablecloths were red and five-stick candelabras with red and white tapers were the table decorations, in addition to vases of carnations, also in the Austrian national colors. ENSEMBLE LOOK that is different and may carry a tinge of forecast is the dress-and-jacket combo of gleaming silk Alaskine, the color of sparkling burgundy. The skirt shape is outstanding and the jacket brief. J. J. Jonas, 189 Bradley Place.

SAILOR GIRL IN WASHABLE, wearable, enviable cotton—the perfect dress for school and play. Navy blue with sailor collar trimmed with white braid, or white sleeveless dress with navy blue sailor collar. Made in California expressly for Lullabye, Worth Avenue.

A net of bright pink pom-poms covers a matching cashmere sweater for a new note in cardigans. Remindful of fiesta time in Spain. From the Spring collection of 'Isabel" sweaters at Saks Fifth Avenue.

TROPICAL EVENINGS are made more alluring in a strapless evening gown of white silk taffeta with bodice of white guipere. The back has an interesting up-sweep of fabric caught at the waist with a single big rose. Exclusively Elizabeth Arden's, Worth Avenue.

POLONAISE OF IRRIDESCENT sequins and crystals on rose pink gros de londre in an extravagant ball gown for important affairs of the fabulous Palm Beach season. Razook's in The Breakers Hotel.

DOUBLE BREASTED BLACK BLAZER with silver buttons. Tailored of feather weight wool, it is perfect for Palm Beach and will travel well through the Summer. A. Sulka & Company, Worth Avenue.

MEN IN SILK! Jackets of raw silk from India make stunning resort wear. Gold and navy checks or, if one prefers, gray, white and blue checks, tailored with the new narrow lapel. Available at Scott's on Worth Avenue.

SILK LINEN IS INVITED to cocktails and attends with effortless grace. Vibrant colors, easy fitting scoop-neck sheaths with a touch of sequin or Madeira embroidery to make them "after five." Alben's, Worth Avenue.

TIME PASSES BEAUTIFULLY when told by a stunning gold key-hole clock. A golden dragon reaches out with long, diamond-studded arms to point the hours and the minutes. The clock rests in a gold and mother of pearl tripod and is from the clock collection of Cartier, Worth Avenue.

CULOTTES ARE BACK AGAIN. Superbly tailored linen culotte-skirts present a lady-like appearance while allowing freedom for active sports. The colors are entrancing—Vegas pink, citrus green, wisteria and mango. Ladd's Royal Poinciana Plaza.

SHIMMERING GOLD in hand knit Lurex makes a cocktail and dinner dress which can journey around the world without a single pressing. The matching cashmere sweater has a round yoke of the same gold lurex thread. Beatrice Morgan, Worth Avenue.

COATS WITH A LITHE FLOW. White, cloud-like wool loosely woven. Wider, shorter sleeves and wide necklines cut back toward the shoulder. Sometimes lined with white, but often in Jordan almond pastels—a compliment to any dress. Martha's, Worth Avenue.

DINNER AND THE THEATRE becomes a gala evening in a white silk brocade theatre ensemble. The slender dress with low scoop neck and bell-shaped skirt is topped with a little jacket cropped at the waist. The elegant simplicity of the costume invites bold color accents. Sara Fredericks, Palm Beach Towers.

SLACKS APPEAL is hot-orange corduroy. Harbingers of Spring, the fine pinwale corduroy newcomers are much in demand. If other colors are desired, there are Kelly green, sky blue, pastel pink and canary yellow to choose from. Schur's, Worth Avenue.

THE PREVAILING PREFERENCE for pink is evident all over town. Pomegranate pink cotton tweed makes a dress-and-jacket costume which goes smartly to luncheon. Shed the jacket and the sleeveless sheath is ready for cocktails. Hattie Carnegie, Royal Poinciana Plaza.

IT'S BEEN A LONG TIME since reptile shoes have been so smart. Color does the fashion trick and, teamed with white calf, lizard, crocodile or snake-skin make fashion news—Heels? Very high or very low—open toe or classic pump, according to how you like them. Delman Shoes, Worth Avenue.

OUTBOARD MOTORS are now jet powered. And what a boon to fishermen. Jet powered motors can go in shallow waters without danger of snags fouling propellers. Very light and serviceable, they come from Italy and are available at Abercrombie and Fitch, Royal Poinciana Plaza.

SOMETHING TO TAKE HOME to the grandchildren. A zillion fascinating toys from which to choose—A circus train, for instance, has all the animals, the clowns and acrobats. Girl or boy, who could resist such a toy! F. A. O. Schwarz, Royal Poinciana Plaza.

PENNSYLVANIA DUTCH DESIGN on blue and white linen makes the bodice of a charming child's dress with pleated skirt of either solid blue or white. One of the custom-made fashions for hard-to-fit children made by Gabrielle's Originals, Worth Avenue.

THE GEM ON YOUR FINGER takes millions of years to grow. Gem minerals from all over the world—sodalite garnet crystals, amathyst, emerald, and others on display at Edward Flanagan, Jewelers, Worth Avenue.

EASY LITTLE FLAT SHOE to wear with shorts or tapered pants. An array of colors to match or complement every sports outfit, calf skin or fabric. Many are jewel trimmed. Kornhauser Shoes, Worth Avenue.

PALM BEACH IS SAID to have more fashion conscious men than most resorts. Be that as it may, well dressed men everywhere know about Oxxford Clothes. The new Spring collection has recently arrived at Frank Brothers, Worth Avenue.

HELP FOR THE SMALL WOMAN. Dresses, suits, ensembles scaled to fit the small adult—doing away with the iniquitous half-size. High fashions, cleverly cut from beautiful fabrics, are available in large selection at Silhouette, Worth Avenue.

MEN'S WATCHES grow sophisticated when they have no need of numerals. The latest imports from Switzerland are handsomely encased, go around as usual, but no numerals are on the face. Position denotes the time. Sober concentration required to tell time quickly. Scott Jenson, Worth Avenue.

Palm Beach
The Winter Capital

By WILMA SPENCER

THIS TIME OF THE YEAR is what Palm Beachers call the "Height of the Season," when there are more people here than other months, and when more "Benefits" are given, and more social activity takes place, unless it is at Christmas time when the younger set is here for their Christmas vacations from schools throughout this Country and abroad.

There are many parties being given both in the homes and at the different Clubs, including the Everglades, Bath and Tennis, Coral Beach, Sailfish Club of Florida, Manalapan, La Coquille, Palm Beach Country, and the Palm Beach Athletic Clubs.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Kay gave a dinner party on the Golf Terrace of the Everglades Club honoring Mr. and Mrs. Donald F. Hyde, of Far Hills, N. J., who are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hutton, at their oceanfront home, "Four Winds."

Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean entertained with a reception at their oceanfront villa in honor of Marcel Marceau following the pantomimist's performance at the Mary Howes "Sunday Evening Series" at the Society of the Four Arts.

Mrs. Robert V. Rasmussen gave a dinner-dance at the former Jelke home on South Ocean Boulevard, for her husband in celebration of his birthday anniversary. Cliff Hall and his Orchestra furnished the music for the occasion.

Mrs. Glenn Stewart gave a cocktail party at her home on North Lake Trail for the unveiling of the portrait in oil of the front entrance of her home, "Sea Grapes." The painting was by Brian Buchel.

The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Howerdd on Via del Mar was the setting for two recent cocktail parties. One was given for Mrs. Owen Cheatham, of New York City, owner of the Dali Jewel Collection. The other was a preview press party for the "Fete du Soleil," honoring Miss Rae de Beaux of New York City.

Mrs. Charles S. Davis was hostess at a dinner party at her estate on South Lake Trail and later took her guests to see the comedy, "My Three Angels," at The Royal Poinciana Playhouse.

Major and Mrs. Frederic C. Collin gave a dinner party at their home on South Ocean Boulevard in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Amory L. Haskell Jr., of Red Bank, N. J., and Bertram Firestone, of New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. Guilford Dudley Jr., entertained with a cocktail party at their oceanfront home in honor of Mrs. Mason Houghland, of Nashville, Tenn., who has recently purchased a home on South Ocean Boulevard, and for Mr. and Mrs. William D. Hail, also of Nashville, and Mr. and Mrs. James Orthwine and Mr. and Mrs. Girard Brownlow, of St. Louis, Mo., who are guests at The Colony for a mid-Winter holiday after a cruise to the Islands.

The Charles Careys gave a large cocktail party at their home on Pendleton Avenue.

Mrs. Robert Oakes Sinclaire was hostess at a bridge-luncheon at her home on Sea Spray Avenue.

A ladies luncheon for eighteen of her friends at the Brazilian Court Hotel was given by Mrs. Austin F. Young, of Wells Road.

The John James Rorecks have been hosts to several parties recently at their home on South Ocean Boulevard. Two were dinner parties and another a large luncheon.

The very young set has taken the spotlight recently, with three-year old Caroline Kennedy and her two month's old brother John Jr., returning to Washington to join their parents, President John F. Kennedy and Mrs. Kennedy. The Kennedy airliner, "Caroline" named in honor of the ingratiating young miss who has stolen the limelight on more than one occasion from her father, transported the children to Washington. Caroline was in Palm Beach from early in December, when she accompanied her father south on his first return trip to Palm Beach after the birth of John Jr., on November 25th, until early February. Both have been at the oceanfront home of their paternal grandparents, former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy. Also at the Kennedy home is Peter Lawford, movie star and son-in-law of the Kennedys, and his two children. Mrs. Lawford was also here for a visit.

FORT LAUDERDALE SOCIETY

By MARGARET WALKER

IT WAS THE TOP of the season, musically and socially, when the Opera Guild of Fort Lauderdale presented "Andrea Chenier" starring the world-renowned Tebaldi, at War Memorial Auditorium.

A reception followed at the Governors' Club Hotel honoring the great soprano and other international stars who gave opera-lovers the most thrilling evening in the Guild's 17-year-old history. Leading roles were sung by baritone Ettore Bastianini and Umberto Borso, magnificent tenor who received an ovation for his stirring performance.

Sports-minded socialites had a hey day, too, at the end of January. Those who aren't strenuously engaged in big game fishing and all the fun attendant on the annual Lauderdale Yacht Club—Fort Lauderdale Fishing Club tournament were spectators at polo—benefit of the Junior League.

That week-end a contingent of Palm Beach, Vero Beach and Hollywood society joined more leisurely Lauderdaleans at a cocktail buffet by Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Kieser at their beautiful apartment in the Four Seasons. A hundred and twenty-five guests were first among a large group who will attend a party series planned this season by the Kiesers.

At the Lauderdale Yacht Club members of the fishing set played hosts to the challenging members of the Fort Lauderdale Fishing Club and wound up the second day of angling with a strictly informal "Gamefish Ball."

The Paris Singers, the Robert Newshams and the Richard Landrums chartered the Bill Carpenters' Caliban. With the Fred Byals aboard their Busy B were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Phipps, Mr. and Mrs. Chris March, Mrs. Betty Mark and Roddy Burdine of Miami, week-end houseguest of his sister and brother-in-law, Zada and Ernie Phipps.

Dr. Warren Traylor, tournament chairman, was on Charles Krivanek's Sylvia, which served as committee boat.

Top prize went to feminine angler, Mrs. A. J. Kosater, with Dick Loehr runner-up and winner in the men's division.

The Reeds came to Miami Beach especially to speak at the Committee of One Hundred's lobster bake at Bal Harbour Yacht Club. The succulent crustaceans were flown down from Maine especially for the feast.

From all sections of South Florida — Miami, Coral Gables, South Miami, Goulds and Miami Beach, came guests to the festive Committee of One Hundred fete, one of the occasions to which the ladies were invited. The Harold Kendalls came from Goulds; Dr. and Mrs. Horace Cartee were among the Coral Gables contingent at the party, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Keyes, with a group of friends, represented Miami. Charles E. Wilson, former president of General Motors, and former Secretary of Defense, and Mrs. Wilson, vacationing at Miami Beach, attended the fete, as did Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wenndorf of Miami Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Moon of Miami, Dr. and Mrs. J. Holden Beckwith, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Kresge, and Canadians Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Tenzer.

All over the area they're still talking about the Twentieth Anniversary Opera Ball held at the Fontainebleu Hotel to celebrate twenty years of opera, and the Opera Guild, in Miami. The ball had all the facets of a Hollywood spectacular, with waiters dressed in brocade costumes to tie in with the theme of the first operatic presentation, "Andrea Chenier"; a tremendous birthday cake; gift giving to Dr. and Mrs. Arturo diFilippi to whom all credit for opera in South Florida truly belongs; pink and garnet decorations of great beauty; Lester Lanin's orchestra that had everybody dancing all night long; the appearance of outstanding opera stars of the Met and La Scala (including Madame Tebaldi), opera and popular songs sung by Regina Sarfaty, another one of the stars of the opera; a delectable dinner with dramatic flaming dessert — even a special prize, an automobile.

Chairmen of the magnificent event were Mrs. James Gerity Jr., Mrs. Nelson Swift Morris and Mrs. George Menninger, with Mrs. Joseph Crawley, Mrs. Redford Crane and Mrs. Wallace Gilroy serving as co-chairmen.

Mrs. Gerity greeted guests in a floor length ball gown of pink satin, the skirt appliqued with black lace. Mrs. Menningen's exquisite gown was regal purple, and Mrs. Morris chose a sparkly sequin and pearl gown, a feature of which was its uneven hemline. The gown, and matching slippers, were made for her in Paris, France, where she has a summer home.

Hosts at Diamond tables at the Opera Ball were Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Ball, the William Hodgkinsons, Mrs. Morris, the William S. Richardsons, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Olson and the Cranes. Sapphire table hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Baron de Hirsch Meyer, the Loren Berrys, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wynn and the Gilroys.

No less resplendent in every detail was the Opera Guild's All-Star luncheon held at the Surf Club, to honor Roberta Peters and the other stars of the opera "Martha," second presentation for the Opera Guild's Twentieth Anniversary season, an opera which was as well received by audiences as "Andrea Chenier."

Chairmen of the All-Star luncheon, which lived up to that name in every way, were Mrs. Neil Miller, Mrs. Harry Simone and Mrs. George Kennedy, with co-chairmen, John Astor, James Gerity Jr. and E. L. Cotton.

The committee, all of whom worked diligently for weeks planning the gala party, were Mrs. William W. Akers Jr., Mrs. C. Leo DeOrsey, Mrs. Harvey Fruehauf, Mrs. August Geiger, Mrs. W. Sanders Gramling, Mrs. Clarence Hand, Mrs. H. W. Hannau, Mrs. P. B. (Spratt) Mangus, Mrs. William B. MacDonald Jr., Mrs. Charles Moon, Mrs. Nelson Swift Morris, Mrs. Emil Morton, Mrs. Bruce Knight (the former Mrs. James L. Oakes Jr.), Mrs. Walter Olson, Mrs. L. B. Smith, Mrs. Elliott Stanford, Mrs. N. A. Tierney, Mrs. J. Howard Van Sciver and Mrs. Germaine C. Wells. A fashion show and dancing were part of entertainment features.

There's a difference of opinion in regard to charity balls between famed party-giver Elsa Maxwell, who came to Miami Beach to preside over the New Dawn Ball held at the Fontainebleu Hotel, and Marianne Reynolds, who has been chairman of the annual Heart Ball in Miami Beach for several seasons. And the controversy, if it may be called that, continues to rage in this South Florida city which perhaps stages more charity events during a season than any other city in these United States.

Elsa Maxwell presided at the New Dawn ball, which singer Irene Patti Swartz of Bay Point chairmaned, and was the houseguest of another veteran partygiver, Mrs. Robert Z. Greene, who chairmaned the Damon Runyon Ball at the Fontainebleu Hotel (she's president of the Damon Runyon Woman's Committee), a ball at which Art Linkletter was a guest. Elsa claims that everyone loves to go to charity balls and believes people revel in the publicity connected with such events, enjoy shopping for the formal finery they wear, and will continue to attend such events, thereby swelling the coffers of welfare projects, as long as such parties continue to be scheduled. This is the age of publicity, she maintains, and people love to see their names in the paper. They pay to be seen at parties but won't donate otherwise, she claims.

Red-haired Marianne Reynolds threw a bombshell into the social set of this area by announcing to her Heart Ball committee, and to the press, that the area has too many charity balls, that as far as the Heart Ball is concerned, she didn't plan one this year, that she's calling this year's effort the Noble (pronounced no-bill) Ball, and urging couples to stay home that evening and donate to, instead of dance for, the Heart Institute.

"There's a ball for everything in Miami except bookmakers," she said. "People should stay home and see what husbands, homes and children look like," the popular divorcee and mother of two sons, concluded.

Who wins the argument will be determined when, and if, checks continue to arrive for the Noble Ball.

A cocktail party for columnist globe-trotter Mary Goodfellow, who in private life is Mrs. Richard C. Doane, took place not long ago in Miami with Mrs. J. Howard Van Sciver in the role of hostess. Helping the hostess and honoree greet guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hills. Locale of the fete was the Fountain Room of the Surf Club. From Palm Beach at the party were Mrs. Horace Dodge and Daniel Moran. Mrs. Dodge was, of couse, discussing the forthcoming Girls' Town ball in Miami on March eleventh at the Fontainebleau, and other plans for this proposed project.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hamilton, newcomers to Miami, were among guests at the Van Sciver party, as were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Parry of Miami Shores, the Connor Feimsters of Miami, Mr. and Mrs. David Frischkorn, whose home is in Bay Point, Miami, the Stephen Quades, the Bill Brewsters and Bob Pentland.

Five Star General Omar Bradley and Mrs. Bradley have been spending a part of the season at their Kenilworth House apartment in Bal Harbour. En route to Miami the General stopped in Georgia to hunt with former President Eisenhower.

Annual Easter Lily Ball was the topic of discussion at a coffee given by Mrs. Judson Sayre at her lovely Indian Creek Island home. Guests were members of the Easter Lily Ball committee and two new members, Mrs. A. J. Gocking and Mrs. Bruce Knight. Mrs. Richard King Lackey, one of the guiding lights in the annual money-raising event, date of which was March seventh at the Surf Club, presided at the coffee. Mrs. Wallace Gilroy entertained the committee at luncheon earlier.

When Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Crum entertained at a brunch at their LaGorce Island home, a Japanese theme prevailed. Some of the Japanese actresses from the Fontainebleu's show came over in their colorful Japanese dresses, Japanese dolls decorated the tables, placed under a tent on the waterfront lawn, and Japanese lanterns hung over the swimming pool.

Among guests at this novel fete was cinema star Gloria Swanson, who came with her friend, Eleanor Straub, whom she was visiting. Also among guests were the Nat Harrisons, Judge and Mrs. Alto Adams, the Niles Trammels, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Edwards, the Carl Forsters, Mr. and Mrs. George Ritter, and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis King.

When Mr. and Mrs. Finis P. Ernest, of East St. Louis and Miami Beach, entertained at a buffet dinner and dance at the Surf Club, honor guest was Grace Dayton of Minneapolis. Receiving with the Ernests and the honor guest was Mrs. John Murrell, sister of Mr. Ernest, and Mr. Murrell.

Avoiding traffic en route to the party, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Sears of Palm Beach cruised down aboard their yacht, Makaira, which they moored at Bal Harbour Club. The Ernests and the Sears met on a round-the-world cruise aboard the Coronia. More out-of-town guests at this party were Mrs. Oscar Liese of Palm Beach; Mr. and Mrs. Murray Watkins of Pompano. Among oldtime Miami Beach residents at the festive fete were the Lowry Walls, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Olds, the Robert Wynns, Mrs. N. B. T. Roney, the Walter Merrills and Mrs. Leona Whitman.

There's no keeping up with the various social clubs in the area. Surf Club is on its round of festive galas, first of which had a Las Vegas theme, and a subsequent one being titled "Maid in Japan." When guests attended one of the season's early fetes at the Bath Club they walked up a gangplank and "set sail" on an imaginary Caribbean cruise; Bal Harbour Yacht Club opened its formal season with a Saturday night event that attracted more than one hundred guests, according to Club President Lou Boshara. Coral Gables Country Club went Roman for its Fiesta di Romana party which was attended by four hundred; Riviera Country Club in the Gables, of which P. J. Cesarano is president, has been playing to "packed houses' all season and Kings Bay Yacht and Country Club, one of the newest in the area, sponsored its first annual president's ball the other night. President is Eugene J. Dunnigan, and before the start of the fete he and Mrs. Dunnigan entertained at a cocktail party for Kings Bay VIPs. Fountains, statues, Greek columns and greenery decorated the candlelit ballroom for the evening. Among persons noted at the Club, located in the southern part of Dade County, were the Emile Cottons, Dr. and Mrs. Hampton Bryson, the Val Steiglitzes, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Grace, the Omar Stangs, the Ben Coopers – to mention a few.

Recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. William L. McKnight of La Gorce Island, Miami Beach, was Peggy Keenan, of Rapid City, S. D., a lady miner. Her mines formerly produced gold, and her father was a miner. Miss Keenan has developed a process which separates the various minerals which are needed today.

Mr. and Mrs. Dale Shaffer and their young daughter, Candy, boarded the Gripsholm for a two months cruise through the Mediterranean, with ports of call in Africa and other spots. The Shaffers' son, "Tiger," is in college, so had to miss the trip. The Shaffers' home on La Gorce Island, Miami Beach, was one of the homes opened for the annual Home and Garden Tour of the Zonta Club of Greater Miami, to support its welfare project, "Recording for the Blind."

Among persons entertaining at large parties at the elaborate St. Francis Ball at the Surf Club were Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Peterson, who hosted a table for thirty at this dinner dance, and Mrs. Nelson Swift Morris, whose guest list numbered forty. This year's ball, the tenth, attracted a capacity crowd, as have all of these functions, originated and underwritten by Fred Snite for the benefit of the St. Francis Hospital at Miami Beach. One of the oldest, and largest, of all the charity balls in the area is this event, which annually assembles more than seven hundred.

Golden Horse Shoe at Miami's annual charity horse show was sparky this year with jewels, furs, gorgeous gowns – and champagne. Each of the five nights of the show, which was held at Dinner Key Auditorium, had sponsors who furnished champagne for the dress circle. Former Sen. Claude Pepper and Mrs. Pepper were sponsors one evening; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ravlin and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pierce co-sponsored one night, and the Charles Hoskins also were sponsors, as were the John McCoys and the George Storers Jr., who co-sponsored one evening, and Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Jones and Mrs. Franz Stewart, who teamed up to sponsor another evening. The show benefits the Women's Cancer Association of the University of Miami. Mr. Pierce and Mrs. Ravlin were co-chairmen of the show. A champagne breakfast on Sunday morning was part of social events connected with the show and honored out-of-town exhibtors and other horse show people. Heading this "bubbly" event were Dr. and Mrs. Harry Dean, Mrs. C. O. Burns and Mrs. Peter Vance. Two yachts were moored at Dinner Key during the proceedings, with horse show people aboard – the Miles Wrights of Charlotte, N. C., aboard their 65-foot Humming Bird, and with them Mrs. Wright's parents, the George Lynn Richardsons of Richmond, Va. Another yacht was the 65-foot Dunwin, with Col. S. A. Jadwin of Warrenton, Va., a judge in the show, aboard.

Fashion shows continue in popularity in the Miami area, and many and large are the ones held at various clubs and hotels. Ladies Day, with fashion shows and other forms of entertainment, continue at the Bath Club, with such Bath Club regulars as Mrs. Frank Root, Harriet Root, Mrs. Spotswood Grant, Mrs. Dan Woolley, Mrs. H. B. Hooper usually on hand. On a day of recent date Admiral and Mrs. Gene Markey, who have a new home on Miami Beach, dropped in during the Ladies Day luncheon hour. More frequently, however, you could find the Markeys at Hialeah Race Track, and after March fourth and the start of the Gulfstream Park meet, watching the thoroughbreds at this "Track-by-the-Sea."

June is supposed to be the month of weddings and engagements, but Dan Cupid has been busy this Winter. The marriage of Katheline Ghislaine Hall and Paul D. Barns Jr. was an important event of January twenty-sixth at the Miami Beach Community Church. Kathy is the daughter of Metro Commissioner Charles F. Hall and Mrs. Hall.

Paul, a native Miamian, was graduated from Washington and Lee University and the University of Florida Law School. He is a member of the Surf, Biscayne Bay Yacht and Coral Reef Yacht Clubs. The couple honeymooned in Nassau; are living in Coral Gables.

The engagement of Mary Francis McKenzie and Dr. Jabog Frederick Straight Jr. has been announced by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Jack Alexander McKenzie of Miami. The wedding will be July eighth.

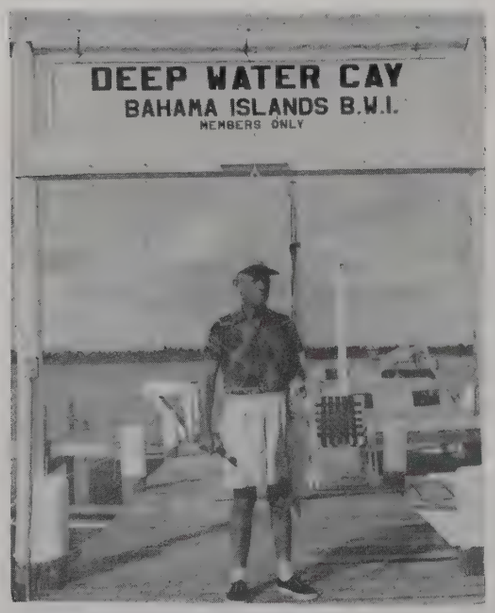
Bantamweight Battler Of The Bahamas

By DON McCARTHY

THE BAHAMAS ARE CONSISTENTLY blessed with the heaviest of five of the top ten gamefish of the salt water world—the blue marlin, white marlin, wahoo, kingfish and bonefish.

A glance at the 1960 charts of the International Game Fish Association will show that the islands hold three-fourths of the current world records for marlin, both blue and white, wahoo and kingfish and four-fifths of the records for bonefish.

I leave it to the outdoor magazines to glorify the deep water fish (marlin, wahoo and kingfish), praising them for their vicious strikes, their aerial acrobatics and their stamina and great bulk. I will sing the praises of the smallest of our salt water gamesters.



Deep Water Cay, owned by Gilbert Drake of Palm Beach, is the newest of more than a dozen shoreside establishments in the Bahamas that cater to the bonefishermen. The author with a 7½-pound bonefish.

It is the bonefish, a fish of insignificant dimentions, rarely exceeding 30 inches in length and averaging less than 8 pounds in weight.

Its scientific name is Albula vulpes, a Latin label for "white fox." Its popular name, bonefish, is derived from the excessive number of bones firmly imbedded in its flesh. Either name fits the fish perfectly.

The bonefish is an alert, overly-cautious, carp-like salt water inhabitant that forages for food in water scarcely deep enough to cover it. And the Bahamas, with unmeasured miles of shallow tidal flats, provide extensive grounds which A. vulpes finds favorable to its chosen way of living, loving and pursuing happiness.

The bonefish is native to warm seas the world around, but it is doubtful that any other territory supports such prodigious numbers as daily drift ghost-like across the shallow flats of the Bahamas.

Despite its Lilliputian size when compared with such husky salt water gamesters as broadbill, marlin, sailfish, tarpon, tuna and wahoo, the bonefish has won a Brobdingnagian reputation. It regularly is ranked among the ten top game fish of the marine world and the reputation is well earned.

A. vulpes swam into the ken of sports fishermen, to its misfortune, in the late 1880s. The angler credited with successfully fishing for and landing the first one on rod and reel was one, Mr. J. B. McFerran of Louisville, Kentucky. The Kentuckian accomplished the historic angling feat after three solid weeks of dogged and frustrating fishing in the vicinity of Bear's Cut, two miles across Biscayne Bay from what now is the city of Miami, Florida.

After his initial experience with the wary "gray ghost" of the shallows, McFerran became a confirmed bonefisherman. In 1902 he was to write to a friend: "I verily believe that, pound for pound, the bonefish is, far and away, the king of all swimmers; and the only objection I can urge against him is that an experience with him forever disqualifies one for all other fishing."

McFerran was a game fisherman familiar with the arm-jolting tactics of such middleweight marine battlers of his day as amberjack, barracuda, kingfish and tarpon. What then were the qualities of the bantamweight bonefish that caught his admiration and fired him to write so praisefully and prophetically?

One would have to encounter this mighty mite on his own grounds to understand the attraction that it exerts. It is a diminutive scrapper with an unprepossessing, pig-like snout, a frail appearing body and a timid nature.

It is gregarious by nature and through the centuries of evolution has adapted its life to areas where there are few natural enemies. Sharks and barracuda feed on small bonefish when able to corner a school in a constricted area. But in the wide-open spaces neither the shark nor the barracuda can match the speed of a frightened bonefish.

The real sport in bonefishing is to be found in the fact that the fish is hunted by sight. Only when a school has been observed approaching the feeding grounds or already rooting in the marl bottom does the angler prepare to present bait to the quarry. And then he is lucky if the cast can be made without spooking the school into wild flight. Should everything be done skillfully and a bonefish takes the lure — whether artificial or a natural bait — it puts up a gallant struggle.

The runs are sizzling and little strategy accompanies its evasive tactics. Occasionally a fish will bury its nose in the sand or rub it against a piece of coral in an attempt to dislodge the hook. But for the most part the bonefish engages in a series of straight-a-way runs, each a little shorter than the last until, exhausted, it can be brouht within reach of the guide's handnet.

From Exuma Sound in the eastern part of the Bahamas came this 85-pound wahoo. It was caught by Col. F. A. Wanklyn, M.C., of Nassau on February 6, 1956, and set a record in the 30-pound-test-of-line class.

It was believed for a while in the early days that A. vulpes was confined to Biscayne Bay off the lower east coast of Florida. There also was a difference of opinion concerning the qualities as a table fish. Some rated it A-1, others A or B, many claimed it to be inedible.

Bahamians, had they been consulted, would have assured the anglers that Biscayne Bay harbored only a fraction of the bonefish population and that the flesh, properly prepared, is delicious.

A. vulpes is as plentiful in the Bahamas as mullet are in Florida waters. Their very numbers, coupled with their habit of feeding on shallow banks and foraging far up tidal creeks, elevated the fish to a major food item on the daily menu of hte Bahamian native.

The natives evolved many ways of taking the fish. In the Abaco Cays, where fishermen were adept in the use of grains (a long handled spear with two or three prongs), they stalked and speared the fish. This method required skill, stealth, keen sight, excellent coordination and unerring accuracy in throwing the grains.

Throughout the rest of the Bahamas, however, the fish were netted or caught on handlines baited with pieces of conch or parts of crab. There also were easier ways than these. When prolonged spells of high winds combined with neap tides to trap a school of bonefish in a tidal pond near a settlement, the villagers waded into the pool and clubbed some of the fish to death. More agile and "sports-minded" villagers would chase the bonefish into docile exhaustion or create enough of a commotion to panic the unhappy creature into throwing themselves on to the shore to flounder helplessly and die.

Mrs. Stafford L. Sands of Nassau receives congratulations from Ernest Vesey of Bermuda for her catch of a 50-pound 12-ounce kingfish on 20-pound line during the 1954 Bahamas-Bermuda angling contest staged at Fresh Creek, Andros. Mrs. Sands set a new women's world record for the species and tackle class.

This 124½-pound white marlin established a world record in the 30-pound-test-of-line class. It was caught at Bimini April 21, 1957, by James French Baldwin.

It is not known when the United States sportsmen first became aware of the limitless legions of bonefish that drift to and fro across the banks of the Bahamas with the rise and fall of the tides. But it is known that B. F. Peek of East Moline, Illinois, landed one weighing 13 pounds 12 ounces on March 9, 1919, while working the flats at Bimini. The catch established an all-tackle world record that stood for 29 years.

Thereafter, Bimini — which was winning a nation-wide reputation as a source of fine liquors among dry-throated victims of U. S. Prohibition — became a Mecca for a handful of bonefish admirers.

Peek's catch in 1919 was discussed with increasing interest. And it was not long before a few of the old timers were slipping over to the land of the original "Fountain of Youth" to investigate conditions there. They found plenty of grounds to explore and vast schools of fish to test their skill and tackle. And by the time of Repeal bonefishermen were rubbing elbows with bootleggers all along Bimini's sand-girt waterfront.

Even Bimini's extensive flats became too crowded for some anglers and soon another area was earmarked as a safe sanctuary for those followers of A. vulpes who yearned for kingly privacy. This was at the Bang Bang Club on Pot Cay in the North Bight, Andros Island, 56 miles southwest of Nassau.

The rival facilities at Bimini and Bang Bang set the pace for a succession of camps, inns, clubs and deluxe hotels that sprang up at widely separated spots in the Bahamas.

All were designed to meet an insistent demand for virgin grounds from the growing ranks of bonefish worshippers. Even the veriest tyro at the sport demanded a princely solitude to be shared only with his quarry, an occasional lonely heron or a swiftly-winging flock of snipe.

A contemporary of Bang Bang is the Walker Cay Club on Walker Cay, the northernmost inhabited island of the Bahamas. This spot, 110 miles northeast of Palm Beach, Florida, probably is better known for its deep water angling and sunken treasure ships than for bonefishing. But it does lie hard by some excellent bonefishing banks located at Grand Cays, four or five miles to the east, and at Great Sale Cay, a few hours run to the south. Occasionally bonefish cruise close to the shore at the west end of Walker Cay, where it is possible to wade out from shore and catch them.

Other bonefishing grounds are to be found at Deep Water Cay off the eastern end of Grand Bahama Island; Green Turtle Cay, Hope Town and Sandy Point, Great Abaco; Harbour Island, Eleuthera; Andros Town on the south bank of Fresh Creek, Andros, and George Town, Exuma. Facilities at these places are comparatively new, having been constructed within the past two to five years.

Anglers fishing the Deep Water Cay sector — which is 130 miles east of Palm Beach, Florida — will find fine accommodations at the Deep Water Cay Club. The area is served by Bahamas Airways and Mackey Airlines out of Miami and West Palm Beach which land at Freeport, about 55 miles from the Club. There also are regular flights between Nassau and Freeport by Bahamas Airways. The balance of the journey is made by the Club's station wagon.

The quaint villages of Hope Town (on Elbow Cay) and Green Turtle Cay — 75 and 100 miles north of Nassau respectively — were settled by British Loyalists who fled the United States in 1776. Their descendants, who still live there, are slowly learning the strange ways of sports fishermen, though privately preferring grains, nets or handlines to spinning gear or fly casting tackle. Both of these tiny, sea-girt islands in the Great Abaco sector have good shoreside accommodations and are served by regular flights of Bahamas Airways out of Nassau.

Mrs. B. A. Garson of Montreal, Canada, and her men's and women's world record bonefish of 13 pounds 12 ounces caught January 3, 1956, in Exuma Sound on 20-pound line.

Mrs. Dorothea Lincoln Dean, Palm Beach, and the women's world record blue marlin of 384 pounds caught on 50-pound-test line at Bimini on July 2, 1957.

Sandy Point on the lower west side of Great Abaco, 56 miles north of Nassau, is not far from the sight of a sunken Spanish ship from which old coins and silver bullion have been salvaged from time to time. Bonefishing, however, remains a more productive pursuit than treasure hunting. Catches of 24 to 36 of these midget gamesters per skiff were racked up during a single tide on several occasions.

These three places are great spots for fishing bonefish "muds." The guides can spot a "mud" half a mile off and will head for it forthwith. Anchored on the outer edge of a "mud," which is a roily area stirred up by a large school of fish rooting in the soft marl bottom, an angler has nothing to do but toss his bait into the milky water and let it sink toward the bottom. Chances are that the bait, whether natural or artificial, will be taken before it has sunk more than a few inches.

Bonefish also can be taken in the deep water of the bay lying between Green Turtle Cay and the Abaco mainland. When found under these conditions the fish usually are performing like a school of mullet. They form a large circle and chase each other's tail around and around for hours at a time. When such a school is located — and keen eyes are needed to spot it — the fisherman has a fine chance to pick up a real heavy fish. They are not as cautious under these conditions as when feeding in shallow water.

To the northeast of Nassau — 25 to 30 minutes by plane — are the small islands of Spanish Wells and Harbour Island. Both have accommodations for anglers. Pink Sands Lodge at Harbour Island makes a specialty of bonefishing, having a fleet of good bonefish skiffs equipped with fast outboards and manned by guides who get a lot of pleasure out of seeing their guests catch fish on artificial lures.

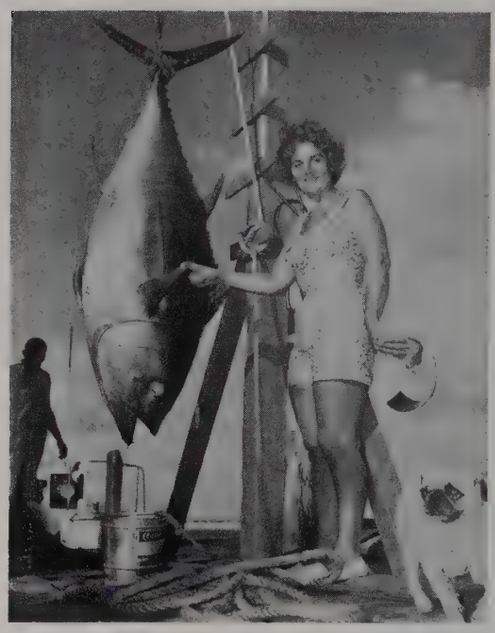
Probably the plushest establishment in the Bahamas' far-flung angling empire is the Lighthouse Club at Andros Town, a mere 22 miles across the Tongue of the Ocean from the western end of New Providence (Nassau). Less than 20 minutes from Nassau by air and favored with scheduled morning and afternoon flights, Andros Town is a convenient gateway to the fabulous bonefish flats of the upper half of Andros Island.

The Berry Island Yacht Club, on Frazers Hog Cay, has dockage and fuel facilities for private pleasure craft and charter boats and the Berry Island Club Hotel provides modern accommodations for anglers.

For those who wish to live ashore in the Exumas there are two places currently offering accommodations. One is the Staniel Cay Yacht Club, 85 miles southeast of Nassau and the other is Club Peace and Plenty on Great Exuma Island.

Bonefish feed principally on crustaceans and mollusks. In the Bahamas the favorite and natural foods are any of a number of species of small crab, certain types of sea urchins, grass shrimp, brittle starfish and several kinds of burrowing shellfish.

However, when feeding over a bottom free of weeds they can be taken on artificial flies and small, weighted spinning lures. The most efficient flies are of the streamer sort in yellow, gray or brown colors or combinations of these shades. The spinning lures that work best are the bucktails in the same colors noted for flies.



From Buenos Aires, Argentina, came Mrs. Pablo Bardin to set a record for big-eyed tuna during the First Annual Bahamas International Tuna Match held at Cat Cay. The fish, caught on 39-thread line, June 2, 1958, weighed 182 pounds.

These are cast far enough ahead of a school of feeding fish to avoid frightening the more alert members of the group. The lure is permitted to sink to the bottom and may be left there for two to five seconds. It is then lifted off the bottom with a twitch of the rod tip and allowed to sink again. Each time it hits the bottom it stirs up a tiny swirl of sand or marl much like a crab or shrimp burrowing into the sand for safety. This action is maintained until either the lure has been completely retrieved or a hungry bonefish has charged and taken it.

The angler who snares a bonefish in this manner and brings it to net on a slender rod and a gossamer thread of line will echo the words of J. B. McFerran: "An experience with the bonefish forever disqualifies the angler for all other fishing."

The Bahamas Development Board has two general tournaments a year. One, in the Winter starts on the second Sunday in January and ends on the last Sunday in April. The other, the Summer contest, commences the third Sunday in June and concludes the first Monday in September (Labor Day).

The bonefish entries in the tournaments usually outnumber those of any other single fish on the list of 23 eligible gamesters. For all bonefish over five pounds the Bahamas Development Board awards a bronze pocket piece and a hand lettered citation.

In addition to these two Bahamas sponsored tournaments there are various other organizations and associations that recognize the bonefish by giving prizes, certificates and badges for the heaviest caught each year. Among them are the Metropolitan Miami Fishing Tournament (Bimini-Cat Cay area), Eastern Airlines Flying Fisheman Club and Field and Stream magazine.

The current International Game Fish Association charts show the following bonefish records credited to the Bahamas.

PATRICIA MASSIE'S PAINTINGS

Highly Distinctive Style Wins Artist Widespread Praise

PALM BEACH INTEREST in art and artists has been focused for many weeks on the upcoming exhibition of paintings by Mrs. Peter A. B. Widener III, known professionally as Patricia Massie, which will be previewed at the Worth Avenue Gallery on Sunday, March 19th.

For the exhibit will mark the second comprehensive showing the artist has had at the distinguished gallery. Her paintings were last seen a the gallery in 1959, at which time her first full one-man show resulted in a complete sell-out.

The success of the exhibit had special significance. For it represented genuine recognition for a young artist who not only began painting in Palm Beach, her native community, but developed a highly distinctive style that has won her widespread praise.

Her forthcoming show, the first since her marriage to Mr. Widener, shows even further how she has matured into a painter whose work reflects a masterful use of color and design.

Viewers will notice, as in the past, that the artist has a special fondness for flowers, animals, birds and sea shells. Each shows a sensitive, meticulous use of detail, as will be seen in four paintings of raccoons: "Happy Easter," "Happy Father's Day," and "Merry Christmas." The last pictures a pensive raccoon at an artist's easel under the title, "Artiste."

Paintings of other animals, all of which are painted with a controlled and assured brush, include "Two Babes in the Wood," and "Owl in Moonlight," "Squirrel Fish," "Bee," "Fish," "Frog," and "Dragon Fly."

Mrs. Widener's paintings have been included in numerous group shows at the gallery. She had her first major showing in an exhibition which also included paintings by the Palm Beach artist Zoe Shippen.

The Maryland Institute of Art served as her initiation into art. However, she first took up painting at the Norton School of Art under the guidance of another noted Palm Beach artist, Eric Lundgren.

Her development as a serious painter was probably influenced through the noted artist muralists Riccardo Magni and Orville Bulman.

Other than her exhibitions at the Worth Avenue Gallery, which alone have gained her national recognition, her paintings have been shown at the Country Art Gallery in Westbury, Long Island, owned by Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson of Hobe Sound.

Today Mrs. Widener paints the world of nature and its creatures from her handsome studio on North Lake Way.

Her paintings are included in the private collections of Mrs. Valentine Bartlett of Hobe Sound; John McConnell of Montreal; The Duke and Duchess of Windsor; Lee Ault, New York publisher; Channing Hare, the noted portrait artist; J. Patrick Lannon of Palm Beach and New York; Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Huntington; Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Gubelmann; Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Lynch Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Byron Ramsing; and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Iglehart and others.

Mrs. Duggett Benson, director of the gallery will receive with Mr. and Mrs. Widener at the preview opening, after which the exhibit will be open to the public through March 31st.

It may be viewed daily from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. and on Saturdays by appointment only. The gallery will close its eighteenth season on Worth Avenue during the week of April second with a group show.

THE INTERNATIONAL SET combined with leaders in Palm Beach society to form the brilliant audience which applauded Marcel Marceau, the French mime, who opened the Sunday Evening Series sponsored by Mary Howes and John Lane on Sunday evening, February fifth, at the Society of the Four Arts. Many in the festive audience, which included Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, mother of President John F. Kennedy, congratulated Miss Howes and Mr. Lane for the fine performance.

Following M. Marceau's performance, Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean entertained at a buffet supper party at their oceanfront villa.

After having presented Anna Russell, the celebrated concert-comedienne, on February nineteenth; and the exciting Roberto Iglesias Ballet Esponal on February twenty-sixth, the Sunday Evening Series will close its third highly successful season with the presentation of "A Party with Betty Comden and Adoph Green" on March twelfth.

Royal Poinciana Plaza Beauty Spot Of Resort

Palm Beach's elegant Royal Poinciana Plaza, oft acclaimed by visiting celebrities, is fast reaching the goal of Michael Phipps, president of Bessemer Properties, who created The Plaza.

Mr. Phipps is of pioneer Palm Beach stock and has great civic pride. After carefully screening many would-be occupants, it was with extreme satisfaction that he could announce the addition this season of the F. A. O. Schwarz toy store, the largest in the world, and Schrafft's restaurant, which opened to more fanfare of celebrities than many premieres.

Among those lending excitement to the opening of Schrafft's were Evangelist Billy Graham, Publisher William Randolph Hearst Jr., and his beautiful wife, former Ambassador Earl E. T. Smith, former Ambassador and father of the President, Joseph P. Kennedy, Senator George Smathers, debutante Nonie Phipps, socialites Mrs. Edward Hutton, Mrs. Edgar Eyre, Milton Holden, Beverly Bogart, and many others of prominence.

Since its opening, Schrafft's has proven highly popular. It has been most welcome news to those who live in the area year 'round that this delightful new restaurant will be open year 'round.

The Royal Poinciana Playhouse has continued with its program of bringing superlative theatre to the Palm Beaches. Only the most important stars are invited to appear there, and among those celebrities, it is considered an honor to be asked by Frank Hale and Paul Crabtree to appear. They have also continued their stellar attractions for the glittering Celebrity Room which is ably supervised by Bob Mentser and Nick Gara.

For shoppers, the Royal Poinciana Plaza is the ultimate in comfort as they may stroll through the garden mall undisturbed by automobile traffic and gasoline odors. Parking facilities are amply planned with perimeter parking surrounding the entire plaza.

The architecture evokes admiration from every visitor who sees the Royal Poinciana Plaza for the first time. Palm Beach architect, John Volk, used the Classic Regency design which goes back to the days of John Nash who was the architect for King George IV. An ageless style, Classic Regency has become the rage in Palm Beach in the past several years with many of Palm Beach's most luxurious homes following those lines.

The traditional lines of the Royal Poinciana Plaza are certain to become as symbolic of Palm Beach as Worth Avenue's once Spanish lines have been in the past.

The exclusive Hattie Carnegie Salon was the first to open in the Plaza, followed soon after by Abercrombie and Fitch, who doubled their floor space with their expansion program this season. Bronzini of New York opened a chic salon last season. Others include Jean Peck and Ladd's, both oldtimers in Palm Beach.

Palm Beach's oldest grocery store, purveyors of fine food, Palm Beach Stores were among the first to open their doors on the completion of the Plaza in 1959. A newcomer is Blumberg's, a famous store in Atlanta, Ga. Worrell's Furniture Store has one of the largest shops. Attracting large clienteles are Elsie's Beauty Salon, Darrah Cooper with jewelry and antiques, Anna's Flowers who opened with a huge following already established in Chicago, Mirror Mart, and the Bert and Richard Morgan Photographic Studio.

Previews, the international realty firm, moved its Palm Beach offices to the Plaza this season. Webb Brothers real estate office also is there as is Henry Harding, the Palm Beach architect.

Bev Smith has a large automobile show room at the southwest corner of The Plaza, and also there are the Palm Beach Civic Association and the Palm Beach Community Chest offices.

Beach Club Hotel

Naples-on-the-Gulf, Florida

The Beach Club Hotel, popular Winter resort in Naples on the lower Sun Coast, has again reached mid-season with a capacity house. From the coldest Northern Winter in seven decades have come the greatest number of people, seeking a respite from the rigors of the North. Naples has experienced the most pleasant season in several years and the velvety green lawns and profusion of flowers are a delightful change from the ice and snow.

After the day's outdoor activities, twilight cocktails in the new Limerick Bar, and a delectable dinner in the newly decorated Seminole Room, guests are happy to enjoy a quiet hour or two in the Gulf Terrace Room where technicolor movies are shown twice weekly on the cinemascope screen.

Always well attended are the steak cookouts in the beach patio. The glowing colors left by the setting sun over the Gulf of Mexico form a perfect backdrop for the diners.

The Sixth Annual Southern Seniors Invitational Golf Tournament was played under sunny skies on an unsurpassed course. Dorsey Nevergall of Pompano Beach, Florida was the winner with a low gross of 218, and Oscar Miller of Logansport, Ind., finished with a low net of 204.

W. T. Brazeau, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., who will be eighty-eight years old March twelfth, shows Mrs. Brazeau putter he used in the Southern Senior Golf Tournament at Naples. He was oldest entry in tournament.

The insertion of the Ladies' Professional event, won by Louise Suggs of Austell, Ga., proved so popular that it will become an integral part of future tournaments. In 1962 the Seniors' Tournament will be held the week of January twenty-first.

Guests of the Beach Club Hotel were recently privileged to witness a golf clinic. It was followed by a nine-hole exhibition play, with well-known lady pros Kathy Whitworth and Mary Ann Reynolds teamed with H. B. Watkins, president of Naples Golf and Beach Club, and the host pro, Paul Bell, making up the foursome. A large gallery followed this interesting event.

Among illustrious guests at the Beach Club Hotel during the past few weeks was Senator George A. Smathers who entertained at a luncheon in the Sea Sprite Room for forty friends. He was accompanied by Mrs. Smathers.

The dessert-fashion show held in the Reef Room of the Beach Club was a huge success in styles shown and its benefit to the Big Cypress Museum. The museum grounds which adjoin the Caribbean Gardens and the building, itself, were a gift from a local resident. A full-time instructor in natural history and nature study holds classes at the museum for interested persons.

The annual Yale Get-together at the Nineteenth Hole Restaurant was attended by thirty-eight members and their guests. Arrangements were made by Ernest Noyes, '97, president; Heaton Treadway, '17, vice president; and John Cowles, '19, secretary-treasurer. Cocktails were followed by a steak dinner and election of officers, after which there was an evening of music, fun and comradeship.

Nautical Nomenclature Blends with Chit Chat at Nassau, Bahamas

By PADDY ROBERTS

NAUTICAL NOMENCLATURE blended with recent party chit chat as a result of the twenty-third Annual Miami-Nassau Ocean Race which brought a migration of enthusiastic participants in the 184-mile event.

One of the fastest in the history of this yachting classic, the race was won by Paper Tiger, a 40-foot yawl owned and skippered by St. Petersburg, Fla., investment analyst John L. Powell. Paper Tiger was designed by Charles Morgan of St. Petersburg, a member of the crew.

First across the finish line—in 23 hours, 12 minutes and 34 seconds—was the sleek 72-foot ketch Ticonderoga, owned by Bill Brittain of Williamstown, Mich.

While their husbands battled at the helm, Mrs. Alfred Lee Loomis of Oyster Bay, N. Y., and Mrs. Emil Mosbacher Jr., of White Plains, N. Y., relaxed on the palm bordered pool patio at yachtsmen's headquarters, the Pilot House Club.

Also waiting were Mrs. Richard Bertram, Coconut Grove, Miami, Fla., and Mrs. Colin E. Ratsey, Rye, N. Y., whose husbands were aboard the ill-fated Delight which was dismasted during the early part of the race. Mr. Ratsey, a keen sailor, is treasurer of Ratsey and Lapthorn, Inc., sail manufacturers.

Mrs. James Rider, Lake Worth, Fla., braved the elements and accompanied her husband, skipper of the Tigress, for the ocean voyage.

Social activities were at a peak as the sailors abandoned sea-togs for more elegant attire. A bright moon shone down on the happy throng which gathered at Sir Roland Symonette's harbor front estate to enjoy the relaxed atmosphere and discuss the results of the big race.

Commodore Arthur Bosworth of the Miami Yacht Club, Miami, Fla., and Sir Roland, who were the original organizers of the annual event, chatted amiably with Mr. and Mrs. Thor Ramsing of Greenwich, Conn. Mr. Ramsing skippered his Solution during the race.

Present for the festivities were Mr. and Mrs. Ned Dunn of Port Washington, N. Y. Mr. Dunn is commodore of the Coral Harbour Club, which feted the yachtsmen to cocktails during their visit.

R. H. (Bobby) Symonette, and his lovely wife, circulated among the throng and stopped for a word with Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin duPont of Pine Orchard, Conn., while handsome Coconut Grove residents Mr. and Mrs. W. Munrow wandered through the palm-lined garden.

Mr. and Mrs. William Carl of Corpus Christi, Tex., were busy describing the hotly-contested Governor's Cup Race, won by Ca Va, on which Mr. Carl crewed. High winds had abated and the weather was a sailor's delight as the trim yachts jockeyed for position off Nassau Lighthouse.

The Montagu Beach Hotel's Jungle Club was the setting for the presentation dinner dance preceded by a cocktail party for skippers and their wives at Government House.

Dining in the club were Mr. and Mrs. James M. Spencer Jr., of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Mrs. Spencer, whose husband owns Tomahawk, was official cook for the seafaring crew aboard the yacht on the Nassau-bound journey.

Marblehead, Mass., skipper Ted Hood was present for the affair with the men who sailed with him on Robin, and their wives, including the Joseph Parkers, the Bradley Noyes, and the Junius Beebes of Cohasset, Mass.

Other well-known yachtsmen in Nassau for the event were Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Virgin Jr., of Miami, who have been regular participants in the race for many years.

And at Nassau's Pilot House Club, manager Denis Hickman gave an art exhibition. The room was gaily decorated for the occasion with large Chinese lanterns and palm fronds strategically placed.

Mr. Hickman, who began painting in 1943 while a prisoner of war, did many of the displayed works during a recent holiday in southern Spain. Mr. Hickman and his charming wife, Peggy, greeted Hugh Wright, manager of Bahamas International Trust Co., and Mrs. Wright.

Katie Moss, wife of British race car driver Stirling Moss, chatted with Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cole of Worcester, Mass., who cruised to New Providence aboard their yacht Bianca.

While some sampled hors d'oeuvres, others discussed the fine display. A few on hand were the Donald Andrews and the Dick Oliphants, wintering at their Hog Island home, Herbert McKinney and Basil Kelly. Dr. and Mrs. Victor Horan stopped to chat with Mrs. John Maura and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bethell.

Neil J. McKinnon, president and chairman of the board of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and Mrs. McKinnon, vacationing in this sun capital, were guests of honor at a reception given by officers of the bank and the Arawak Trust Company with which it is affiliated.

Arawak executives and their wives who welcomed the many residents included Robert

Pringle, vice president and general manager, John Adams, executive vice president, and Sir Roland Robinson, member of Parliament for Blackpool, and chairman of the board of the Trust Company.

Douglas Haig, manager of the bank in Nassau, and Mrs. Haig were present with Mrs. Haig's sister and brother-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Allen of Vancouver, B. C., who were houseguests at the Haig's beautiful home in Nassau.

The inaugural weekly voyage of the M. S. Italia, luxury cruise ship of Home Lines Agency, Inc., from New York to Nassau was a big step forward in improved transportation links from the United States to the Bahamas.

Many Nassau residents were invited aboard to inspect the ship and to enjoy the scrumptious buffet. The Chairman of the Bahamas Development Board, Stafford L. Sands, and Mrs. Sands, joined Capt. Mario Vespa, vice president of Home Lines, Mr. and Mrs. C. Trevor Kelly and Jack Kelly, president of Kelly-Nason, Inc., advertising agency, for drinks in one of the picturesque lounges.

Pan American World Airways marked another advance in the overall transportation network so vital to the Bahamas, with daily jet service between Nassau and Miami. Among the passengers was Capt. Basil Rowe, who piloted the first passenger flight ever to travel between the two cities.

Also disembarking in Nassau were Sir David and Lady Robertson of London, and Group Capt. and Mrs. Ralph W. Wallace of Berkshire.

Howard M. Lockhart, well-known Scottish broadcaster and playwright was another notable on the cruise. Mr. Lockhart, who visited the Bahamas to collect material for a radio program to be broadcast on the Scottish network of the British Broadcasting Corp. was guest of honor at the annual Caledonian Society Ball in Nassau.

Other Britishers beckoned to these shores were Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Fisher of Sussex, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Evans-Jones of Yorkshire, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Roland Dawes of Worcestershire. The Dawes were joined by son Dr. Michael Dawes and his wife at the Coral Harbour Club. Dr. Dawes is on the staff of Boston City Hospital in Boston, Mass.

SARASOTA

By MARION MURRAY

Mrs. Andrew Sandegren entertains at Sarasota Bay Country Club. From the left: First, Mrs. Sandegren greets Mrs. Sherman B. vander Voort. Second, Mrs. F. W. Pendexter of Chicago, Mrs. Fenton Gilbert of Sarasota, and Mrs. A. T. Wilkinson of Boston. Third, Mrs. T. W. Mather, Mrs. E. J. Seibert, Mrs. Jack Siler, Mrs. Frank S. Thyne.

HUNDREDS OF ARTISTS and guests, temporarily become Balinese dancers, geisha girls, Chinese coolies, Japanese emperors, or sari-clad Indians, or clad in habiliments more or less vaguely suggesting the Far East, whirled gaily in the packed Municipal Auditorium on March second, for the Sarasota Art Association's fourteenth annual Beaux Arts Ball.

The Oriental theme gave many Sarasotans an opportunity to wear authentic costumes, which they themselves had brought back from the East.

During the past several years, it has become more and more the thing for this city's residents to go around the world, or even to cross the Pacific and return without visiting Europe at all. Naturally, no feminine creature can conceivably return, even by air, without some garments in Oriental style, or at least fabrics that can be fashioned into colorful wearing apparel.

Of course, those who have lived in the Orient are especially fortunate.

Many beautiful and rare objets d'art grace the home of Colonel and Mrs. Julian Dayton, which they built on Freeling Drive in 1954. And Mrs. Dayton treasures especially two magnificent obis—either one of which will make even the simplest kimono look regal.

For several years, Colonel Dayton was stationed in Nanking, where he was senior advisor to the Chinese Infantry School, and where he and Mrs. Dayton remained until they were forced to leave, with other Americans, in 1948. After that, for four years, he was in Japan, in command of the Kanto Region of the Military Government, dealing directly with the Japanese—thus coming into unusually close contact with the people. The Daytons lived in a Japanese house in Tokyo, and traveled around the country a good deal.

One of the two priceless obis (shown in the photograph), which Mrs. Dayton donned at Beaux Art time, is of white, gold, yellow and autumn shades, and was woven as part of a wedding costume for a granddaughter of the once fabulously wealthy house of Mitzui, at the family mills in Kyoto. After the war, the owner sold it to Mrs. Dayton. The latter wears in her hair ornaments given to her by a geisha. She looks at her reflection in a kagami, or polished metal mirror (one of four in different sizes), which came from a temple and may be as much as 1,000 years old. On a tonsu, or chest, from Hokkaido, stands a screen used in the tea ceremony.

For the Baeux Arts, Pakistan was represented by Mrs. William W. Quarles of Point of Rocks, in an authentic costume she brought back from a recent trip.

Mrs. Quarles and Mrs. Sherman B. vander Voort, also of Point of Rocks, sailed from New York on August nineteenth, and thence on to Honolulu and Yokohama. By ship, plane and overland travel, they visited various parts of Japan, went to Hong Kong, Bangkok, Singapore, Penang, Bombay and other cities in India, and reached Pakistan, where they saw friends at the American Embassy. In Karachi, Mrs. Quarles bought the shalwar (loose trousers), kaimaze (overdress) dupcotta (veil) and earrings she wears in the photograph. On the way home, there were Suez, Cairo—with trips across the desert and on the Nile, Naples, and several ports in Italy. Their ship reached New York on November thirteenth.

Both Mrs. Quarles and Mrs. vander Voort were guests at a buffet luncheon and card party given in February at the Sarasota Bay Country Club by Mrs. Andrew Sandegren of Bay Shore Road. Mrs. Sandegren wore one of several dresses of Oriental silk she brought back with her last year when she visited the Far East.

Time was—and not so long ago—when newcomers to Sarasota knew too little about the innumerable trees, shrubs, and flowers that can be grown here to make fascinating plantings. Since its inception, the Garden Club has been espousing the cause of better understanding and more effective use of materials, and for thirty-four years the Tree Circle has put on an annual Motorcade, to show various kinds of horticultural ingenuity.

This year, the Motorcade will leave the Municipal Auditorium at noon on March twenty-second, with cars furnished by the Circle, and wind up late in the afternoon at the Garden Center, where tea will be served under the chairmanship of Mrs. Kennett Potter, who is in charge of the Center itself. Special emphasis this year will be on patios and lanais, and gardens will be opened both north and south of the town.

Even on Florida's West Coast, weather must be taken into account, and at present writing final decisions have not yet been made as to just where the cars will stop. However, permission has already been obtained for them to go into the grounds of "Cherokee Lodge," the estate of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hinman; "Immokalee," that of Honore Palmer; the bird sanctuary, with its lake and waterfall in many acres of natural beauty, preserved along the South Trail by Mr. and Mrs. Clyde H. Wilson; and to drive through the Field Club down along the Bay, and walk through the Succulent Gardens in the northern part of the city. It is possible that cars will also go through Hidden Harbor on Siesta Key.

Other individuals who have agreed to open their gardens, and in some instances their homes, are: Mr. and Mrs. Karl A. Bickel, Mrs. J. W. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Hoiles, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Thacker, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. McEeachern, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bishop.

The committee in charge of the Motorcade consists of Mrs. Chester A. Ihrig and Mrs.

At the Junior Welfare League Ball, from the left: William E. Getzen, Mrs. Getzen, Mrs. Russell D. Thomas, Judge Thomas, Mrs. W. Davis Parker. Second, Miss Virginia Bradley and Mrs. John Bradley of Grenada, Miss.; Mrs. J. J. Williams Jr., and Mr. Williams; standing: Mrs. Clarke N. Olney and Mr. Olney.

H. S. Hannis, co-chairmen; Mrs. Lynn L. Silvertooth, homes and gardens; Mrs. Oscar Babcock, tickets; Mrs. R. E. Turner and Mrs. Eugene Jones, starters; Mrs. Louis Caravelli, posters; Mrs. W. H. Bishop, flower arrangements; Mrs. Kennett Potter, tea. The entourage will be escorted by the police, and all cars will go by the same route.

Those whose opinions should be respected say that the fourth annual exhibition of Associated Florida Sculptors, which was seen at the Ringling Museum from February fourth to twenty-eighth, was the best sculpture show ever seen in Sarasota, and one of the best in Florida.

Sculptors, painters, teachers of art and civic members of the Art Association made up most of the large gathering at the opening reception, to see fifty pieces set up in a dramatic presentation arranged by Sophie Johnstone, president of the group. There were many abstract, or much simplified or stylized creations, and a few that might be called representational—in stone, wood, metal, terra cotta and sometimes less traditional materials.

First prize was awarded by the jurors—Heinz Warneke and Wilfred M. Zogbaum—to Clayton Charles of the University of Miami for "Reunion;" second to Rob Spring of Sarasota for "Winged Figure No. 2;" third to Frankie MacDonald of Jacksonville for "Harbor No. 1;" and fourth to Leslie Posie of Sarasota for "Rima."

Honorable mentions went to Peggy Atkinson of Jacksonville; Frank Colson, Tallahassee; Ralph Noel Dagg of Sarasota; George H. Holschuh, FSU, Tallahassee; and Veegee Stern, Sarasota. Thirty-seven individuals and organizations contributed to the prize fund.

Frank Rampolla and Elden Rowland won prizes for painting in the Abstract Show at the SAA, and Sophie Johnstone, that for sculpture. Those artists will be presented in a three-man show next year at the Association's galleries. Awards were made by James B. Byrnes of the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh, and Stuart Purser, professor of art at FSU. The judges also awarded honorable mentions to Robert McFarland and Syd Solomon.

At the reception the Florida West Coast Symphony gave for members of the Vienna Octet are David Cohen, Symphony concertmaster, and Anton Fietz, first violinist of Octet. Second, At the Associated Florida Sculptors' exhibition reception, Helen Q. Remsen, sculptor, serves Mrs. Ralph N. Dagg. Third, Carl Muhlenbruch of Tec-Search, Inc., Evanston, Ill., with Veegee Stern, honorable mention winner, and Kenneth Thompson, Sarasota city manager.

This exhibition was followed by a group show of representational work, for which Xavier Gonzales of New York and Miami, and Dr. Schubert Jones of Fort Lauderdale were judges.

A panel discussion of modern art made one of the Special Events programs presented for the Art Association under the chairmanship of Marion Cristiani.

Glenna Finch, second vice president, in charge of exhibition, recently had a one-man show at St. Armand's Gallery.

This year, the Petticoat Painters, a group that has given annual exhibitions for a number of years, showed their work at the new studio of Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Leech. The group now consists of Helen Auchterlonie, Elsinore Budd, Stella Coler, Genevieve Hamel, Martha Hartman, Florence Etter Meade, Eve Root, Jane Ziegler, Helen Frank Protas, Judy Axe, Shirley Clement, Dorothy MacDonald, Margaret Sturgis, and Helen Sawyer, its founder, plus four new members—Jane Gross, Glenna Finch, Rachel Wells and Sally Hayden.

The Sarasota Art Association assisted the St. Boniface Church committee in arranging details of the exhibition that opened in the church's parish hall and garden with a tea on February twenty-sixth. The SAA's artists' committee chose the two jurors—Janet Reid Kellogg of Bradenton, and Loran Wilford of Sarasota, and the show was hung by a committee working under the direction of Amalie Wright, sculptor, and Glenna Finch, painter.

Exhibitions have been hanging all over the city and on the keys. Works by Elden Rowland and Marcel Sessler were shown in the Citizens' Bank; of Charles Nelson Bradley and Helen Frank Protas, in the Cinema Theater Gallery; of Frances Wing, Frances Archdeacon, Echo Reigle and the Art Spirit of Venice, in the various branches of the Sarasota Federal Savings and Loan; Sally Hayden in Jerry's Restaurant; Frances Archdeacon in a one-man show at Siesta Studios; and watercolors by Frank Bowser of Key West at Siesta Key Gallery.

On March nineteenth, a Students' Award Show opens with a tea at the Longboat Key Art Center. Among recent exhibitions there were: one by Al Buell and Thornton Utz, famous illustrators, a Members' Juried Show, and a Photographic Exhibition.

Syd Solomon of Sarasota won first prize in painting at the State Fair in Tampa. Second went to William Pachner of Clearwater Beach; third to William Edward Parker of Neptune Beach; and fourth to Robert McFarland of Bradenton.

The Turnau Opera Players, who are appearing in the Asolo Theater of the Ringling Museum through March fifteenth, for their second season here, are offering Rossini's "La Cenerendola," Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro," and "Cosi Fan Tutte," Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas" with Monteverdi's "Il Combattimento." On February twenty-fourth, the performance of "Figaro" was given as a benefit for the Symphony Woman's Association.

Last Summer's Festival of plays given by Florida State University artists at the Asolo was such a success that another is being planned for this year. The group is charge—which calls itself the Manatee Asolo Theater Festival Committee, consists of Dr. Arthur H. Dorlag of FSU, Director, Florence Ashby of FSU, Barbara Bell of the Ringling Museum, Conrad Horn, and Hans Tews, Sara-Manatee chapter president of FSU alumni.

PALM BEACH BILTMORE HOTEL

THE FULL IMPACT of the busy Winter social season is apparent with the influx of more and more guests at The Palm Beach Biltmore, host to the international smart set and home to many seasonal 'regulars,' from New York City, Chicago, Boston, and Canada.

Winging in often by way of the islands seasonal visitors from Europe gather in the newly decorated beige and black Lounge to read their foreign newspapers, and chat with friends in French, Hungarian, and Spanish.

Combining soft tropical temperatures redolent of jasmine, pine and salt air with good programming and entertainment the guests here find they can set their own holiday pace. All modes of recreation are available, or one may bypass it all for the beach, and complete relaxation alone.

Those who love social functions find luncheons enhanced by fashion shows, dinner parties follow dinner parties in the Rib Room on the lower level of the Hotel, which is also studded with smart shops.

Like a large family the guests gather every afternoon, following a shopping tour, or a day at the Sun and Surf Club, in the Florida Room for the Traditional Tea Hour. This is popular with the men as well as the ladies, and where they recount the happenings of the day.

Night-time brings with it the magic of moonlight on the Cabana Terrace, and dancing to the soft strains of Ruby Newman's Society Orchestra. Or the tempo will change when Tommy Ayala, a featured member of the band, swings into song with his guitar and foot-tapping rhythms, and Mambos will follow a Marangue.

This is the Biltmore Hotel's second social season under the ownership of the Hotel Corporation of America, and the 1961 guest list has surpassed all previous records according to Felix H. Standen, general manager.

The Winter season to a myriad of stateside and European visitors means the Palm Beach Biltmore.

Many parties have been scheduled in the Tropical Dining Room, the new Cocktail Lounge, and the Rib Room. Admiral John J. Bergen and his wife recently entertained groups of friends for cocktails, and dinner. Admiral and Mrs. Bergen are occupying their suite in the Biltmore for the season, a custom they have followed for many seasons.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Sonnebend also have been entertaining friends since their arrival at the Hotel, where they occupy a Tower suite.

Visitors from afar have included Lady Cayzer and her son Sir James Cayzer of Newtyle, Angus, Scotland; Paliz Warshawski of Paris, France; Mrs. R. Burton of London; and Sir Claude Corea, Ceylon's ambassador to the United Nations from New York City.

MRS. ESTELLE PARKER HOAGLAND

SOCIETY'S YOUNGEST SMART SET played to a full house at the Everglades Club's pre-Valentine tombola luncheon in the only spontaneous and un-rehearsed fashion show of the season — Estelle Parker's fourteenth annual "Sweethearts on Parade."

Fond parents, doting grand-parents and a fine showing of friends greeted the fascinating toddlers, four-to-ten years olds and junior misses with enthusiastic applause as they appeared in trend setting fashions for Spring and Summer.

Generally speaking the models took the whole thing with charming nonchalance, with no holdbacks and shy head-duckings, and thoroughly delighted their big audience.

Each of them was dressed in the most attractive clothes imaginable for all the occasions of a childs life — play, school, Sundays and parties, all of which beggar description. Style setting trends, fabrics and colors were noted as something new in children's fashions.

PALM BEACH TOWERS

THIS SEASON FINDS Palm Beach Towers becoming more and more an integral part of the community for its elegance is in keeping with the tempo of Palm Beach where the style for resort living has been set for three generations.

Countess R. Czernichew travelled from Cuernavacha, Mexico, to reside at The Palm Beach Towers while here to see her close friend, Miss Helen Hayes, in the opening of "The Glass Menagerie" at The Playhouse.

Arriving the same week to see the play was Miss Hayes' houseguest, Miss Lily Lodge, daughter of the out-going Ambassador to Spain, John Davis Lodge. At Christmas time Miss Lodge visited her parents and sister Beatrice in Madrid. Her sister just recently became engaged to a Spanish diplomat, Antonio Oyarzabal. Her mother is the former Francesca Braggiotti, sister of Marie Braggiotti who has been connected musically with the Royal Poinciana Playhouse.

Miss Lily Lodge now devotes her time to lecturing on behalf of the Shakespearean Festival at Stratford, Conn. of which Lawrence Langner is founder and chairman. The Langners, co-directors of the Theatre Guild, have been at The Towers for weeks while working on the production of three plays at The Playhouse and later are to tour overseas for the State Department.

At the Lovely Lido Biltmore Club in Sarasota, Florida, the season is in full swing. One of the most popular features of life in this exclusive resort are the dansants held several afternoons a week in the smart Lorelei Room. At these cocktail-time affairs guests chat with friends, sip Paul's delightful presentations, and dance to the music of a sparkling three-piece orchestra.

The ever-popular out-door luncheons served on the beach patio are still a favorite way of combining Chef Zamboni's delicious cuisine with uninterrupted enjoyment of sparkling sand and a vista of the blue waters of the Gulf of Mexico, and that wonderful Florida sunshine. And the weather has permitted—indeed, encouraged—these luncheons, as well as swimming, and just sunning on the Lido Biltmore Club's private beach.

THE NATION'S CAPITAL

By HAZEL MARKEL

PRESIDENT and Mrs. John F. Kennedy launched the White House social season with a swearing-in ceremony and large reception for new presidential appointees. Families and friends of the honor guests gathered in the handsome gold and white East Room where Chief Justice Warren in his black judicial robes administered the oath in the presence of the President and First Lady and the Vice President and Mrs. Johnson. Lovely Jacqueline Kennedy was chic in a sleeveless black velvet sheath embroidered in black satin. Her only jewels were a glittering diamond bracelet, engagement ring and wedding band. Ladybird Johnson was pretty in a rich green brocade suit collared in marten.

Immediately after the ceremony, President and Mrs. Kennedy were escorted to the Blue Room by his military aides Brigadier General Chester V. Clifton USA, Colonel Godfrey McHugh USAF and Commander Tazewell Shephard USN. There with Vice President and Mrs. Johnson and Chief Justice and Mrs. Warren they received the several hundred guests. THE STATE OF THE UNION message when delivered in person to the joint session of Congress by the Chief Executive always is a top-echelon event with Washington's diplomatic corps, social set and high officialdom in attendance. John F. Kennedy's first appearance in the House of Representatives as President was such an event. The center of attention in the House Gallery traditionally is the Executive Box where the First Lady and her party sit surrounded by Cabinet and Diplomatic wives. Beauteous Mrs. Kennedy, making her first official appearance since Inauguration, wore a magenta wool suit with short box jacket and Persian lamb buttons. A black velvet pillbox hat topped her lustrous black hair. With her was her youthful, pretty mother Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss wearing a sapphire blue ensemble trimmed in black velvet. Also in the party were Mr. Auchincloss, Vivacious Mrs. Robert Kennedy and the President's friend and Choate classmate Lemoyne Billings of New York City. Directly across the aisle from Mrs. Kennedy sat Mrs. Lyndon Johnson in a smart olive green suit and matching hat.

On the floor, famous House Doorkeeper William "Fishbait" Miller announced the arrival of the Senate, the Supreme Court, the Diplomatic Corps and Cabinet. Vice President Johnson sat with Speaker Rayburn on the rostrum. House Chaplain Bernard Braskamp gave the invocation. Then came the announcement "The President of the United States" which brought a resounding ovation. The handsome young President in blue suit with light-striped tie came in escorted by Senators Mansfield, Humphrey, Smathers, Dirksen and Kuchel. Mrs. Kennedy joined in the applause and from that moment kept her eyes intently and proudly on her husband until he left the House Chamber after the sober and eloquent speech.

Mrs. Earl Warren, wife of the Chief Justice, was among official wives along with Mrs. Douglas Dillon wearing a shocking pink suit, Mrs. Arthur Goldberg in shades of brown and beige, and blonde Mrs. Stewart Udall in black. Nearby we spotted Mrs. John McClelland, Mrs. Dennis Chavez, Mrs. Styles Bridges and Mrs. Clair Engle. Among ladies in the Diplomatic box were Peru's Senora de Berckemeyer sitting with the Netherlands' Madame van Roijen and Ecuador's Senora de Ponce L. Madame Thors of Iceland wore a handsome full-length mink coat as she sat beside Signora Brosio of Italy. France's Madame Alphand was swathed in breath-of-spring mink and blonde Senora de Muller of Chile also joined the mink brigade in a wrap of honey beige tones. Poland's Madame Spasowska, Japan's Madame Asakai, Finland's Madame Seppala, Denmark's Countess Knuth-Winterfeldt, and Israel's Mrs. Harman were others. Latin ladies included such charmers as Senora del Carril, Senora de Sanz de Santamaria, Senora de Carillo and Senora de Urrutria.

Luncheons followed the speech with President Kennedy the guest of Senator and Mrs. William Fulbright in the Foreign Relations Committee Room. Other guests included Vice President Johnson, Netherlands Ambassador and Madame van Roijen, Treasury Secretary and Mrs. Dillon, Senators Mansfield and Hickenlooper, Senator and Mrs. John Sherman Cooper and Mr. and Mrs. Clark Clifford.

Senator and Mrs. Albert Gore had the Luxembourg Ambassador and Madame Heisbourg as guests and Senator John Sparkman of Alabama lunched a deux with his pretty daughter Mrs. Tazewell Shepard, wife of the Naval aide to President Kennedy. With the International Set converging at The Colony Hotel, it wasn't too surprising to note the arrival in February of society's entrepreneur, Elsa Maxwell. Though Miss Maxwell's visit was brief, she voiced her delight with The Colony Hotel.

Completely unsolicited, she said that it was the first time she had ever stayed at a hotel in Palm Beach and was going to recommend it to her friends, Prince Rainier and Princess Grace whom she revealed were considering a Palm Beach visit in the Spring. Miss Maxwell, who on this visit was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Winston Guest, added that she was going to return late in March to spend a week as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Loel Guinness and a week as the houseguest of Christopher Dunphy.

Coincidentally, her friends, The Duke and Duchess of Windsor will be in Palm Beach at the same time. They have leased a penthouse at the Colony Hotel for the month of April, though they will arrive sometime late in March to visit friends for a week before coming on to The Colony. They, too, will be staying in a Palm Beach Hotel for the first time.

Princess Laura Rospigliosi, one of Palm Beach's popular figures spent a week at The Colony Hotel with Mrs. Earl Dodge. They had previously been in Naples, Florida. On Mrs. Dodge's return to New York City, Princess Rospigliosi decided to remain in Palm Beach for an extended holiday as the houseguest of Mrs. Middleton O'Malley-Keyes.

Carlos Alemany cut quite a swath on his visit to The Colony Hotel. He was in Palm Beach for the Dali "Art in Jewels" exhibition at the Findlay Galleries benefitting the Junior Museum. Mr. Alemany was responsible for the collection in the first place. An old friend of Dali's, he persuaded Dali to transmit his thoughts into terms of precious stones and jewelry. He financed the project which took four and a half years to create. It took four more years to sell intact, though they had many who wanted to purchase individual pieces, among those were art connoisseurs, Chester Dale and Henry Ford Jr. It is now owned by the Owen Cheatham Foundation which uses it for philanthropic purposes.

Bachelor Alemany enjoyed many parties in Palm Beach as many of his friends from Southampton, L.I. winter here.

OWNED AND OPERATED BY HOTEL CORPORATION OF AMERICA

Pure elegance . . . with a two-year/24,000-mile pledge of excellence*

Now America has a new kind of fine car, one that provides even greater luxury and comfort in 14 inches less length. Specifically designed for today's close-packed traffic, the new Lincoln Continental is slimmer, easier to park and handle. But its greatest achievement is in standards of quality and reliability . . . standards so high that it, alone, among all American cars, can be warranted for two full years or 24,000 miles.

There are so many other pleasures to discover: Doors that open at the centerline for unusual ease of entrance. Contour-zoned seats cushioned with nearly twice the usual amount of foam rubber. The first hydraulic windshield wipers, silent and 50 percent more powerful. This country's only four-door convertible. America's largest V-8 engine—and biggest brakes.

This car is so advanced in design and durability it will keep right on revealing new virtues mile after velvet mile—but isn't that just the enduring kind of automobile you've wanted?

LINCOLN-MERCURY DIVISION Ford Motor Company

*Ford Motor Company warrants to its dealers, and its dealers, in turn, warrant to their Lincoln Continental customers as follows: That for 24 months or 24,000 miles, whichever comes first, free replacement, including related labor, will be made by dealers, of any part with a defect in workmanship or materials. Tires are not covered by the warranty: appropriate adjustments will continue to be made by the tire companies. Owners will remain responsible for normal maintenance service and routine replacement of maintenance items such as filters, spark plugs, ignition points and wiper blades.

IMPERIAL DIVISION OF CHRYSLER CORPORATION

Tomorrow . . . point it to the sun

When you've changed into something light and casual, driving down to meet summer halfway, you'll notice a change in your Imperial, too.

The Imperial you've known all winter long as an elegant, urbane, urban car is now a practical cross-country traveler.

Imperial is the year-in, year-out choice of experts who judge a car on its roadability. Long, long distances are little challenge to Imperial travelers. You'll add an extra hundred or so easy, restful miles to each leg of your jaunt to sun country . . . because Imperial's unique steering and torsion-bar suspension, its deep foam-padded seats, its magnificent roominess block out fatigue and restlessness.

And if your Imperial has Auto-Pilot, you can travel mile after mile, up hill and down, at a constant speed, without so much as a touch on the accelerator.

You'll note, too, that doormen, bell captains and maitres de seem a bit more helpful when you arrive in an Imperial.

First, see your Imperial dealer . . . then, go find your private share of summer somewhere far away.

THE ROLLS-ROYCE SILVER CLOUD II—$15,655 P.O.E.

Should every corporation buy its president a Rolls-Royce?

There is much to be said for it. It is a prudent investment. It enhances the public image of the company. And rank is entitled to its rewards.

A GREAT MANY of the Rolls-Royce and Bentley cars sold in England are sold to companies for the use of their top executives. "Take a Rolls-Royce or Bentley into partnership," is a saying well observed by British businessmen.

What makes the Rolls-Royce the best executive car in the world? Consider these facts:

Long-range economy

A good part of the cost can often be written off in five years or less.

The car will then be in the infancy of its usefulness. You can sell it for a good price or continue to drive it for many more years.

The Rolls-Royce obviates the extravagant practice of trading in cars frequently for later models. This costs you money each time a change is made. With the money that is wasted in a few such transactions, the company could have bought a Rolls-Royce.

No "planned obsolescence"

The owner of a Rolls-Royce is not threatened by annual style changes. Only an expert can tell whether it was bought yesterday or five years ago. The Rolls-Royce people do not practice a cynical and self-serving policy of "planned obsolescence."

Operating costs are no higher than with any other powerful car.

Maintenance is minimal. With Rolls-Royce dealers throughout the country, service is no problem.

Your president will live longer

Send the Rolls-Royce to fetch your president from his home every morning; he will reach the office in better shape. During the day, emancipate him from waiting for taxis on street corners. At night, send him home in the Rolls-Royce—he can do his homework, or take a nap. Do these things, and your president will be a better president. He will also live longer.

A safe car

On bad roads, or in heavy traffic, the Rolls-Royce can be handled like a sports car. It will not normally be so driven. But such driving shows the great ability of the vehicle to cope with critical circumstances.

The brakes have no equal in the world. There are three independent linkages. Should one fail (an unlikely event), the others will keep the car under control. "We would never produce a car that would outperform its brakes," says a Rolls-Royce engineer.

Free from exhibitionism

An executive's car, like his office, undoubtedly influences public opinion toward his company. The Rolls-Royce implies taste, conservatism and a regard for quality. Of all luxury cars, it is the least exhibitionistic.

A source of contentment

There is satisfaction in owning such an exquisite piece of machinery. To handle a Rolls-Royce, to look at it, even to smell its leather, are pleasures which the executive of a successful company should not be denied.

Those presidents who feel diffident about driving a Rolls-Royce can be provided with a Bentley. It is exactly the same car, except for the radiator. It costs $300 less.

If you would like more information, write Rolls-Royce, Inc., 45 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20. If you are interested in taking a demonstration drive in a Rolls-Royce or Bentley, get in touch with the dealer listed below.

Outer Space, the theme, was most notably represented by the decor of the oval-shaped rotunda where a planetarium-like effect was gained by having walls and vaulted ceiling of blue nylon twinkling with stars and planets and hung with a few less ethereal objects resembling man-made satellites. Richard Mill, artist and decorator, again volunteered his services.

The candidates' gowns were by Louis Estevez, in shades of blues and greens in chiffon with velvet.

Mrs. Donald D. Burr was chairman of the Ball, and the master of ceremonies was Bud Collyer. Betty Furness and Tom Poston were the television commentators. Ben Ludlow played for the pageant and for dancing.

The pageant featured the traditional Parade of Junior League models, each representing one of the sixteen companies who sponsored this year's Mardi Gras Fete. The fabulous costumes, depicting places of interest in New York, were designed by Ed Wittstein, television and stage designer.

Miss Alicia Juwikova was dressed as a classic ballerina under a long white satin coat shaped like a swan. She was attended by Miss Christine Vanderwarker, a page in pink velvet and carrying a gold trumpet.

Mrs. Celeste Luce and her partner in purple and white velveteen skating costumes danced around Miss Aline Randles as a Christmas tree in green net trimmed with colorful spangles, lights and mirrors. Mrs. Lester Kelly's costume was in pink, lavender and red satin and incorporated a montage of typical New York signs. Her headdress was a lighted lamp post.

Mrs. Samuel R. Campbell Jr. wore a black net gown covered with brilliant stars and her hat (made of crystals on a blue-mirrored globe) represented the universe.

In a setting reminiscent of a seaside resort in the tropical islands of the Caribbean, the Jamaica and Antigua Carnival was held at the Sheraton-East for the benefit of the Cancer Foundation of the Variety Club of New York. The carnival atmosphere of the traditional Shrove Tuesday festivities was emphasized in the colorful costumes of the several hundred guests and the native calypso music and entertainment. The guests entered the ballroom by way of a gangplank contributed by the Incres Steamship Line, one of several sponsors of the benefit, and which included also the Hon. Abe Issa, C.B.E., Richard C. Cowell, the Jamaica Tourist Board, the British West Indian Airways and the Alcoa Steamship Line. Palm trees, two dozen aquariums filled with tropical fish and hundreds of sea shells all added to the illusion of a scene in the tropics. A buffet supper was served from several bamboo huts set up in the ballroom and the Trianon Room.

Miss Susan Van Wyck, who was chosen to serve as queen of the carnival, assisted by two maids of honor, the Misses Aurora Moore and Gail Guest, and a court of young women, all dressed in colorful resort costumes, led the procession with the Baron Theo von Roth, who produced the carnival. In the Trianon Room and the Ballroom, music for dancing was contributed by several orchestras, the Duke of Iron and his calypso troubadours, McKinley Graves and their Latino Septet and the steel bands of Rey Carl and his Moderneers and the Versatile Victor Brady. Other entertainment was presented by Lonnie Sattin, Mike Quashie, Tony Harris and Albert Hopwell.

Paradise Found: BIRD KEY

EVER SINCE THE ROMANCE of island living was brought to the attention of the public through novels and motion pictures, many people have ventured from their homes in cities and suburbs to seek a private paradise on some remote atoll.

A few of these adventurers find what they are looking for and establish permanent homes, but a majority of twentieth century island hunters return home because their paradise was too far removed from the conveniences to which they had been accustomed on the mainland.

But all is not lost for those who want their island and have their mainland, too. An isle fulfilling their fondest desires can be found in Sarasota Bay. It's called Bird Key.

Sarasota has long been noted for the majestic keys which dot its Bay and lie in the Gulf of Mexico that touches its shores. Until recently, a large portion of some of these keys exist today as they did in 1593 when DeSoto discovered them.

Bird Key was one of the Sarasota island properties purchased in 1958 by Arvida Realty Co., a subsidiary of Arvida Corporation, one of Florida's largest real estate development companies.

Located off John Ringling Causeway about a mile from downtown Sarasota, Bird Key was chosen as the first of Arvida's Sarasota properties to be developed. In a year's time after development work started, the key was changed into a beautiful setting for modern semi-tropical homes. A fabulous yacht club, complete with a marina, tennis court and other recreational facilities, was constructed. Five hundred and eleven homesites, each with electrical, water and sewage facilities, were developed, many of them on the Bay or along the community's free-flowing waterways.

Arvida Realty Co. installed the electrical utility system completely underground to preserve the natural beauty of the key. No poles or overhead wires detract from the community's appearance.

The Bird Key Yacht Club is the social center of the community. Designed by Kannenberg and Hanebuth, well-known Florida architects, it is one of the most outstanding structures on Florida's West Coast.

The main dining room of the club overlooks the marina and Sarasota Bay. In addition to the main dining room the club also contains an attractive cocktail lounge, a men's grill and card room, a ladies' card room and lounge. The interior of the club is richly decorated and furnished.

Many families seeking a private island paradise with all the luxuries of modern Florida living and convenient access to the shops, churches, schools, cultural centers and other attractions in the area have made their homes on Bird Key. For those residents who also desire to travel far beyond Sarasota, the Sarasota-Bradenton airport is a ten-minute drive from their homes. Bird Key has the distinction of being one of the very few luxury communities in Florida that is located so near to a major airport.

The "lure of the islands" is powerful and, because of the manner in which it was developed, it is certain that Bird Key has more attraction than any isle to be found in exotic waters.

NASSAU'S HEADDRESS BALL

By PADDY ROBERTS

A RAINBOW OF MAGNIFICENT ball gowns and a glamorous array of personalities set the stage for the Annual Bahamas Humane Society Headdress Ball at the Bahamas Country Club.

One of the social highlights of Nassau's Winter season, the affair attracted more than 350 merry guests, many of whom were attired in cleverly-designed headdresses.

Striking in a floor length gown of red lace was Mrs. John F. Baron, who with her husband recently came from Calgary, Alta., Can., to take up residence in the Bahamas. Joining them for dinner was Mrs. Pat Carruthers of Nassau and her escort Fane Solomon, a local merchant.

Mrs. Clifton Borer, president of the Humane Society and the person responsible for the ball's organization, was at a ringside table with Mr. Borer, Dr. and Mrs. Victor Horan, and Mr. and Mrs. Trevor Marshall. Mrs. Horan is vice president of the organization, and Mrs. Marshall is secretary.

Mrs. R. J. Robertson, an enthusiastic patron of the Bahamas Humane Society, was hostess to a large party which included Dr. and Mrs. Duane Beam of Grosse Pointe, Mich. Dr. Beam, a well-known eye surgeon, and his wife have a Winter home at Governor's Harbour on beautiful Eleuthera Island. Mrs. Robertson's youngest son, MacGregor, and Miss Madeline Moody of Nassau made a handsome pair on the dance floor.

Sir George Roberts, president of the Bahamas Legislative Council, and Lady Roberts were present with Lady Roberts' sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Pinder of Nassau.

Former Chief Justice of the Bahamas, Sir Guy Henderson, and Lady Henderson were hosts at a table which included Nassau residents Mrs. John Ferguson, Mrs. Winthrop Bradley, Jim Kenny, an executive with Bethlehem Steel, and Mr. Justice Soarr, the new puisne judge of the Supreme Court in Nassau.

Commander and Mrs. Dwight Paul of Palm Beach and Nassau chatted with the John Bells of Roslyn, N. Y., who are wintering at their home Way-a-Way in Nassau; Sir Oswald and Lady Bancroft of Nassau. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ingram of Eastbourne, England, were in the same party. Mrs. Ingram was sister of the late Frederick Sigrist.

Artistic and imaginative headdresses were plentiful in the parade. Mrs. Jimmy Albury of Nassau, who with her husband is a regular winner in the event, appeared with a huge cock perched atop a weather vane while he wore an underwater scene, complete with fish wending their way through an array of sea fans and coral reef.

The award for the most beautiful chapeau was won by Mrs. Douglas Haig, wife of the Canadian Bank of Commerce manager. Her gaily decorated straw hat was enhanced with colorful croton leaves, hibiscus and clusters of grapes.

During the course of the evening guests were treated to a skillful performance of flamenco dancing by Roberto Iglesias and Rosario Galan. They were part of the Iglesias dance troupe, in Nassau to perform a ballet at the Playhouse of the British Colonial Hotel.

Dancing to the smooth music played by the orchestra were Mr. and Mrs. Philip Pool; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Oliphant of Old Saybrook, Conn., Mr. and Mrs. Richard I. N. Weingart.

Mrs. Gordon Anderson, whose pink plumed headdress beautifully accentuated her chiffon ball gown, had a word with Frank Bottrill, general manager of the Bank of London and Montreal in Nassau.

Enjoying the festivities was His Excellency the Governor of the Bahamas, Sir Robert Stapledon, and Lady Stapledon, who happily applauded the lavish headdress parade after which Lady Stapledon presented the prizes.

At a nearby table was the Hon. Harold G. Christie and Mrs. Christie, who were hosts to Mr. Christie's nephew Peter and his charming wife Rosemarie; Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Plummer of Nassau and George Hambleton, district sales manager of PAA in Nassau.

Sportsminded folk were treated to a special Ladies Race at Nassau's unique Hobby Horse Hall race track. Lining the entrance to the popular racecourse were dozens of multicolored flags and the blare of the bugle announcing the start of the race provided the traditional air of excitement as the ladies mounted their sturdy ponies.

Scanning the entry list was the American Consul General of the Bahamas and Mrs. John Barnard, with Mr. Justice Campbell, Chief Justice of the Bahamas, who was official starter for the Ladies Race.

The ladies rode like champions and the competition was spirited. Petite Mrs. John Whitehead of Nassau on Bahamian Gal was heralded into the winner's circle where Sir Roland Symonette, Leader for the Government in the Bahamas House of Assembly, presented her with the sparkling silver trophy.

Other race participants included Nassau residents Lady Greta Oakes; Miss Mary Ann O'Brien; Miss Carol Johnson; Mrs. Don Seiler; Mrs. Basil McKinney; Miss Jennifer McElwee; Mrs. Ulerio Ferguson, and Miss Hanna Watson.

Dr. Raymond Sawyer, managing director of Bahamas Raceco Ltd., owners of Hobby Horse Hall, and Mrs. Sawyer, were hosts to Vivian Vance, a star on the "I Love Lucy" television show; and John Baragrey. Miss Vance and Mr. Baragrey starred in "The Marriage-Go-Round" at the Nassau Playhouse.

PALMS of the WORLD

By MARTHA LUMMUS

FAIRCHILD TROPICAL GARDEN, 85-acre paradise and largest tropical botanical garden in the United States, which started out as a scientific venture and wound up becoming one of Greater Miami's most popular tourist attractions, soon will become a research center as well. Construction will begin shortly on a research building to serve also as a center for complete identification of tropical plants.

Two new staff members are joining Fairchild Garden for this research — Dr. P. B. Tomlinson, former professor at the University of Leeds in England who also experimented in palms while in Ghana, Africa for three years and, botanist Robert Read, of Cornell graduate school.

Dr. Tomlinson's specialty is plant physiology. If his experiments are successful, a tremendous breakthrough in science is expected. Fairchild Tropical Garden, noted for the largest collection of palm species in the world will afford Dr. Tomlinson plenty of material on which to work. Read's main task is to be the identification of tropical plants.

Located fifteen minutes south of downtown Miami at 10901 Old Cutler Road, Fairchild Tropical Garden is visited by thousands of persons annually, many of whom come from far away countries especially to see the garden's priceless collection of tropical plants — the largest in the United States.

Broad vistas, picturesque lakes and winding pathways shaded by towering palms are sources of great delight to South Florida tourists, as is a sunken garden displaying jungle plants growing under conditions similar to those of the deep tropics.

One section of the Garden is devoted to philodendrons, and the Garden's cycad collection is the largest in the Western Hemisphere. Frequently mistaken for palms, these fern-like plants are thought to have thrived on the earth eons ago in the days of the dinosaur.

Florida State News Bureau

The palm collection is the most important contribution the Fairchild Garden has made to plant science and to horticulture. The collection contains about 500 kinds, one of which is the bottle palm pictured above, and has by far the largest palm collection within continental United States. A goal of 1,000 species has been set.

Others points of great interest at Fairchild Tropical Garden are its gift shop, "The Palm Spathe," and its palm products Montgomery Museum and Library, as well as its Nell Montgomery Garden House, which has an auditorium seating five hundred. A colorful hibiscus garden, rare orchids and foliage plants, and an amphitheatre built with funds contributed by garden club members throughout the nations, are other attractions. The Garden is open free to the public daily.

Palm products handmade by natives of Bali, Jamaica, Honolulu and Manila are displayed in the Montgomery Museum at the entrance of the Garden. Here, too, is a reference and lending library for members. Visitors stroll through the Garden at their leisure, or for a nominal price, take a guided motorized tram tour. Each plant and tree in the garden is tagged with its name, origin, and characteristics for the benefit of sightseers who strike out on their own.

Fairchild Tropical Garden was founded in 1938 by the late Colonel Robert H. Montgomery, New York tax attorney and an avid plant collector who made his Winter home in Florida.. Colonel Montgomery named the garden for his friend, the late Dr. David Fairchild, often called the father of modern plant introduction. Deeded by Montgomery to the public, the Garden is maintained by the Dade County Parks Department, which also contributes financially to its upkeep.

Although a favorite beauty spot, the Garden likewise has contributed much to scientific and education research. All scientific work is directed and administered by a non-profit group known as the Fairchild Tropical Garden Association. Many important horticultural and other groups hold meetings at the Garden, or come in groups to visit it. Recently the National Academy of Sciences held a meeting there, and a conducted tour for members of the Garden Clubs of America was a feature of that convention when held in Palm Beach, the members coming by chartered bus to Fairchild Garden.

Present president of the Fairchild Tropical Garden is O. C. Corbin, and executive vice president is Mrs. Alvin R. Jennings, the former Mrs. Montgomery. Vice presidents are Mrs. David Fairchild, Harold F. Loomis and Roy Page. Secretary is author Marjory Stoneman Douglas, and treasurer is John R. Ring. Miami Herald Garden Editor Nixon Smiley is director of the Garden and members of the board of managers include, in addition to the above officers, Charles H. Crandon (chairman), A. D. Barnes, financier Arthur Vining Davis, The Rev. David J. Davis, D.D.; Mrs. J. Simpson Dean, Henry F. duPont, Mrs. John W. Galbreath, Dr. Gilbert H. Grosvenor, Mrs. Jennings, Mrs. W. Alton

Sugar palm (Arenga Pinnata), with its huge bloom clusters, always attracts attention, especially from visitors who have never seen a large palm in flower. These palms, many of which flourish in Fairchild Tropical Garden, are an important source of sugar in the Far East, the tapped flower spathe yielding large amounts of sweet liquid.

Jones, Mrs. Alfred G. Kay, Dr. G. H. M. Lawrence, T. Brown McClelland, George W. Mead, Dr. Arthur Montgomery, Dr. Jay R. W. Pearson, president of the University of Miami; John D. Pennekamp, Dr. William J. Robbins, Prior Sinclair, Dr. Robert T. Spicer, M.D., and Mrs. Willis D. Wood.

One of the most important functions of the association, which numbers about 1400 members, is to introduce new plants into this country from Latin America. Species that prove adaptable to South Florida soil and climate are propagated for distribution to Garden members. Thus, many plants widely grown in Florida today can be traced to the Fairchild Garden.

Lectures on scientific subjects are sponsored by the association in a series called The Montgomery Lectures, as are classes in landscaping, flower arranging and other allied garden subjects. These events are conducted in the Nell Montgomery Garden house, a structure named for Mrs. Jennings.

Major source of financial support comes from Garden membership dues, contributions, and the large annual outdoor rummage sale held in December at the Garden. Sponsored by the association, these "Rambles" as they are called, bring from $12,000 to $17,000 annually, and draw as many as 30,000 visitors over a two-day period.

In addition to the buildings mentioned above, the Garden has within its environs a director's house, a gift from Arthur Vining Davis, which at the present time is used as a guest house for the numerous important people who come to Miami to participate in activities at the Garden.

There's never a day in the year, it is said, when Fairchild Garden is without bloom. All its plants are of tropical origin, and most of these plants come from lands where there is no frost. Visitors are cautioned, however, not to come to Fairchild Garden expecting every plant to be abloom, or to find a field of annuals and perennials. Colorful tropical foliage, lacy leaves, trees bearing fruit more colorful than flowers (the lipstick tree, for example) abound. If there is a "best time" to see most plants in bloom at Fairchild at one time, it's probbly mid-Winter to early Spring — South Florida's dry season. Visitors have learned that the Garden, instead of a flowering one, is a botanical one, where form, lushness and texture in a setting of good design dominate most of the time, and where flowers are an extra dividend. The tram tour, which leaves every hour on the hour, lasts thirty minutes — ample time to see the Garden's triangular palm from Madagascr, the swollen-trunk Baobab tree from tropical Africa, the cannonball tree from South America, the bombax malabaricum, and countless others.

William Lymn Phillips, a one-time associate of the famous American landscape architect, Frederick Law Olmsted Jr., designed Fairchild Tropical Garden, and guided its planting.

At the present time the Garden has a small staff, with only two members trained in botany and horticulture — Stanley Kiem, a botanist, is superintendent, and Derck Burch, a graduate of the University of Wales, a horticulturist. The Garden has been fortunate to have some of the best minds in the field of plant science assisting in its plans — names such as Monroe R. Birdsey, University of Miami; I. D. Clements, Harvard University; W. H. Hodge, Longwood Gardens; E. W. McElwee, University of Florida; Harold E. Moore Jr., Bailey Hortorium; W. J. Robbins, formerly director of the New York Botanical Garden, and George D. Ruehle, University of Florida. Mr. Ruehle is head of the Subtropical Experiment Station at Homestead, some 15 miles from the Garden.

MIAMI SOCIETY

By MARTHA LUMMUS

Mrs. James Gerity Jr., dancing with Ettore Bastianni at the elaborate twentieth anniversary Opera Ball sponsored by the Opera Guild of Miami. Mrs. Gerity with Mrs. George Menninger and Mrs. Nelson Swift Morris were the Ball chairmen.

THE ADVENT OF EASTER and the Lenten season didn't curtail too severely social activities among the South Florida social set, who are enjoying one last fling before the end of the season, when they scatter to go their various ways throughout the Summer months — some to the mountains, others to another seashore, and still others on cruise trips that carry them to the four corners of the world for rest, recreation, relaxation and sightseeing.

A sea of Easter Lilies, as joyous, resplendent and magnificent as the Easter season itself, greets guests annually at the Easter Lily Ball, which with the annual St. Francis Hospital Ball is one of the largest and most popular of all charity events held in the South Florida area. The Ball was held March seventh at the Surf Club.

Originated by Mrs. James L. Knight and Mrs. Glenn F. Warren, now past co-chairmen of this event which has helped substantially in building the large rehabilitation center of the Crippled Children's Society in Miami, co-chairmen of this year's ball were Mrs. Richard King Lackey, Mrs. Julio Sanchez and Mrs. Bruce Knight, the former Mrs. James L. Oakes Jr. Among other chairmen were Mrs. Radford R. Crane and Mrs. W. George Kennedy, patrons; Mrs. B. Boyd Benjamin and Mrs. Robert Z. Greene, finance; Mrs. Theodore S. Gary and Mrs. Samuel Becker, publicity; Mrs. Wallace Gilroy and Mrs. William H. Stevens, entertainment; Mrs. Harry Simone and Mrs. Joseph E. Crawley, invitations; Mrs. Charles Curtis King and Mrs. Ewart Angus, decorations; Mrs. Florence Bettendorf and Mrs. A. J. Gocking, reservations; Mrs. Orion Mather and Mrs. Edwin L. Wiegand, prizes; Mrs. James A. Dixon and Mrs. Comer J. Kimball, program.

Fred B. Snite, Illinois industrial tycoon, always picks up the tab for the dinner and all other expenses at the annual dinner dance he sponsors for the benefit of St. Francis Hospital, Miami Beach. The hospital is the richer each year by at least $50,000 — often more. This year's dinner dance, held as always at the Surf Club, marked the tenth anniversary of the dance, and attracted more than six hundred and fifty guests. Mrs. Leo Edwards, the former Mrs. Don Allen, was chairman of the women's committee, with Mrs. Snite serving as honorary chairman. St. Francis Hospital has been serving Miami Beach residents since 1927.

Mrs. Robert Z. Greene, chairman of the annual Damon Runyon Ball, this year having its second yearly fete at the Fontainebleau Hotel, really gives that "personal touch" to her party. Each one of the three hundred guests who attend come because of a personal telephone conversation, for no invitations were issued. Tickets were either picked up or delivered in person, and each contribution was acknowledged by a personal thank-you note written by Mrs. Greene, who also is president of the National Ladies Auxiliary of the Damon Runyon Foundation. Since Mrs. Greene assumed that position a little more than a year ago, the Foundation has distributed over $100,000 within this area.

Mr. and Mrs. Siguard Naess, River Forest, Ill., neighbors of the Fred B. Snites in Illinois, at the St. Francis Hospital dinner-dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Cerf were houseguests of the Greenes the weekend before the ball, and of course stayed for the fabulous fete. Mr. and Mrs. Art Linkletter also were there. Other houseguests of the Greenes, and of course guests at the benefit ball, were Howard Ahmanson, Dr. Lorraine Johnson, Alan Chase and Abe Wexler, who owns the Four Seasons restaurant in New York, and Mrs. Wexler. Among other VIPs at the Greene's table at the ball were General Omar Bradley and Mrs. Bradley; Bob Hope, who with Art Linkletter and Dean Murphy were part of the entertainment program, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wenndorf, Mrs. Odette Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Lackey, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shelden, Dr. Jay Pearson, president of the University of Miami, and Mrs. Pearson; John Teeter, executive director of the Damon Runyon Foundation and Mrs. Teeter, the Louis Wolfsons, Dr. Ralph Jones of the University of Miami Medical School, and Mrs. Jones.

Leave it to James Gerity Jr., president of the Committee of One Hundred of Miami Beach, to come up with one of the most unusual fetes of the entire season — a real, old-fashioned New England clambake! The party was held at the Bal Harbour Beach Club, with the Hon. John H. Reed, Governor of Maine, and Mrs. Reed honor guests.

Among other members of the official party in Miami with the Governor and Mrs. Reed were two Maine commissioners and their wives — Ronald Green, commissioner of sea and shore fisheries and Mrs. Green; and Lloyd Allen, commissioner of economic development, and Mrs. Allen.

Governor and Mrs. Reed and some of the other members of the Maine party were houseguests of Baron and Baroness Vladimir K. von Poushental, who entertained for them the following day at an elaborate reception at their plush North Bay Road home, Miami Beach.

It's history now, but Roberta Peters' performances in the opera "Martha" will long be remembered, as will the beautiful all-star luncheon given during that same week of opera. The luncheon was held at the Surf Club.

Chairmen were Mrs. Neil Miller, Mrs. Harry Simone and Mrs. George Kennedy, with three men — John Astor, James Gerity Jr. and E. L. Cotton — assuming the role of co-chairmen.

Fashions and Easter just naturally go together, so it isn't surprising that the Vizcayans always plan an Easter afternoon walk in the gardens of Dade County's art museum, Vizcaya, former home of the late James Deering, and at this time feature fashions and Easter bonnets. Nor is this the only fashion fete the Vizcayans stage during the season. Their annual fashion extravaganza "Fete du Soleil" took on an international flavor, with fashions created by American and European designers using the elegant fabrics of the International Silk Company. Locale of the show was the Americana Hotel. Among members of the committee were Mrs. Robert Lawson, Mrs. John Shutt, Mrs. Carlos Lamar, Miss Evelyn Mitchell and Mrs. Frank Woods.

When racing fans and members of the social set who enjoy "the sport of kings" went to Gulfstream Park, the home of the Florida Derby, opening day for the start of the racing meet at this last of South Florida's three race tracks to open for the season, they were greeted by the track's president James Dunn and Mrs. Dunn and viewed the races from a gorgeous new clubhouse — spacious, elegant and beautiful. Persons lucky enough to receive invitations to a preview of the clubhouse on February twenty-sixth thrilled to the sight, even before opening day at the Gulfstream track.

On Widener day at Hialeah Race Track, Widener colors glowed on the table for seventeen luncheon guests, where P. A. B. Widener III, grandson of the founder of modern Hialeah, and his wife honored Governor and Mrs. Farris Bryant of Florida. Joining the Wideners for lunch and to watch the famed $100,000 classic were Admiral and Mrs. Gene Markey, owners of Calumet Farm, whose horse "Yorky" won the Widener Stakes race; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, George D. Widener and Mrs. Widener; Mr. and Mrs. Cartright Wetherill, who flew down from Philadelphia (Mrs. Wetherill is the former Ella Widener) and Mrs. Francis Gowen of Philadelphia, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Combs II and Mr. and Mrs. John C. Clark, former president of Hialeah.

At the Committee of One Hundred clambake at the Bal Harbour Beach Club, from the left: Tom Ryan, Denver, Colo.; Mrs. Desmond Clarke, Canada and Miami Beach; Mrs. Ryan and Mr. Clarke.

Mrs. Edward S. Moore, Miami Beach and Lexington, Ky., and Fred B. Snite smile over the success of the St. Francis Hospital dinner-dance at the Surf Club. Mrs. Moore is owner of a stable of race horses that race at the South Florida tracks.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Mather II also entertained on Widener Day. The Mathers are neighbors of the Wideners in Philadelphia and spend the winters in Bal Harbour. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. George W. Headley of Palm Beach and Lexington, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Matzinger, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Herris, Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus R. Trout of Palm Beach and Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Whitmere of Palm Beach; Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson of Hobe Sound; Mrs. Edward S. Moore, Mrs. James R. Lowell of Palm Beach, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. H. Thouron and Mr. and Mrs. John Needles.

Mr. and Mrs. Forsythe Jerome McNulty of Palm Beach had as their luncheon guests at Hialeah on Widener Day, Count and Countess Maxie de Pulaski, Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Dodge, Miss Lorraine Gallagher and her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Gallagher, all of Palm Beach, and Eugene J. Hines of Washington.

When Mr. and Mrs. George Whitten entertained at a dinner dance at the Surf Club their honor guest was Polly Bergen.

Book reviews by that popular book reviewer, Florence Bourke Ellis, who comes to Miami Beach each year for appearances at the Surf Club, packed people in for the series, as have all the spectacular galas at the club, and the star nights which have featured celebrities, including Liberace. Ladies Day luncheons at the Bath Club, famous for its buffet, continue popular, with large parties in various rooms of the club. Mrs. William Orr, longtime Miami Beach Winter resident, entertained there recently, on the same day that Mrs. Hugh Emerson and Mrs. Harry Bellenger gave parties.

More popular than ever, and star-studded, too, are the many club events at Indian Creek Country Club, which are sell outs, especially on celebrity nights.

Off to India and a tiger shoot is Mrs. Phil Gallagher. The pretty matron, who is to be the guest of the Maharajah of Cooch-Behar, went by way of Tokyo and Hong Kong.

The Lloyd Dilworths and the Drexel Rutherfords teamed up for a buffet dinner dance at the Surf Club and the Ben Kirkendalls delighted their friends with a stone crab feast at their LaGorce Drive home, an annual event that is one of the most unique in the area.

Additions to the Consular Corps in Miami are Frank Smitherman, new British Consul, and his wife, Frances. They are in the U.S. after serving in the Sudan, and entertained recently for John Duncan of the British Information Services in New York.

Sure and they were wearin' of the green while they dined and danced at the Surf Club on Friday, March seventeenth, at a St. Patrick's Day party given by Mr. and Mrs. Curtis King for their South Florida friends.

Biscayne Bay Yacht Club's annual George Washington's birthday chowder party is an event as traditional as the 74-year-old club. Location of the chowder party was near Cape Florida Light, site accessible only by boat.

They'll be talking for many a year about the elaborate wedding reception at the Surf Club that followed the marriage of Mrs. James L. Oakes Jr. and Bruce L. Knight on Valentine's Day. The newlyweds left on a chartered 110-foot yacht, Sea Panther (formerly the Big Pebble owned by Mrs. Edward S. Moore) for a Nassau honeymoon.

Nor has Dan Cupid been idle with the debutante set. Two of this season's debs, who bowed to society at the December Debutante Ball at the Surf Club, are making plans to walk down the aisle and say their "I do's." Jenny Ross Akers, daughter of the William W. Akers Jr. of Miami Beach, is engaged to Joseph Craig Douglass, son of the Carl Douglasses of Golden Beach.

Suzanne Sottile, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Sottile Jr., is engaged to Charles Guanci, the boy who escorted her to all her debutante parties. A June wedding is planned.

Former debutante Laura Elizabeth Hooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hooper, was married to Charles William Hedden III on Sunday, February fifth, in Coral Gables, and the couple is making their home in Shelbyville, Ky. The bridegroom is the brother of Laura Elizabeth's sister-in-law, Mrs. Fred Hooper Jr., the former Lucinda Hedden. The bride made her debut in 1958.

Dolores Walker, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William H. Walker and a debutante of 1956, is now Mrs. Joseph Krebs Jr. The newlyweds are living in Miami, after a Caribbean honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Eugene Wallace of Coral Gables have announced the engagement and approaching marriage of their post-deb daughter, Carol Ring Wallace, to Philip Livingston Brawner of Coral Gables, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Pierce Brawner of Ocean Ridge, Florida. Miss Wallace made her debut at the 1955 Debutante Ball at the Surf Club. She is a provisional member of the Junior League of Miami. The wedding date is May twentieth.

Gulfstream Boasts New Clubhouse

A NEW FRONTIER in race track architecture was opened March fourth when Gulfstream began its 43-day meeting at Hallandale, Florida. The new $1,000,000 clubhouse, doubling the former capacity, affords a bold concept in the art of presenting thoroughbred racing in plush surroundings.

A magnificent new weather-proof entrance has been created. Patrons go from their cars directly into a tremendous lobby. Flooring is of black and white marble. Gold columns, adorned by unique fixtures of crystal and brass mark the center of the area and the back drop is a series of windows emblazoned with horseshoe designs. Also there is a dias called "The Winner's Circle" tastefully decorated in orchid satin upholstered furniture resting on an ankle-deep carpet of turquoise.

The interior of the structure is based on complete freedom of movement, even at the mutuels windows. Betting windows, bank type and encased in Japanese mosaic tile, are of the "island" type to prevent bottlenecks.

Terrazzo floors, highlighted by imbedded orchids that are Gulfstream's official flower; indirect lighting and plush lounge type seating are among the other inovations featured throughout the architectural masterpiece.

Thirsty visitors found a new Finish Line Bar and Derby Lounge that would make any smart night club operator envious.

The tartan colors of James Donn, president of Gulfstream, have been made into a smart plaid of red, green and brown as part of the second floor decor. The Turf Club and Turf Terrace third floor features blue and yellow, uniquely blended with paneling to create a gorgeous dining room, lounge and wagering section.

Of course, horses also receive some attention during the Gulfstream meeting. Two $100,000 races grace the program — The Gulfstream Park Handicap March 18 and the Florida Derby April 1. Fourteen other stakes and features, worth $215,000 are also on the agenda. Total purse distribution will be $1,723,329.

THE NATION'S CAPITAL

By HAZEL MARKEL

PRESIDENT AND MRS. KENNEDY have put a brilliant new spark into the Capital social scene. Not only has the handsome young couple set the tone for the White House season with an elegant reception for the Diplomatic Corps but they have been guests at a number of events both large and small, private and official. Coveted invitations are those to parties that just may have that magic ingredient which puts it into the "fabulous" class — the presence of the Chief Executive and his Lady.

DIPLOMATS were honored by President and Mrs. Kennedy at a 5 to 7 p.m. reception that brought flattering comment from Embassy Row. Noted was the "warmth and friendliness" of the party, the "ease and charm" of the hosts. Gentlemen were correctly attired in morning club coats, striped trousers, gray vests and ties. Ladies donned dressy afternoon dress. And adding drama to the scene was the national dress of many guests — the flowing robes of Saudi Arabian Ambassador Shiekh Al-Khayyal, the white wrapped robe of Guinea's Ambassador Diallo, the glamorous saris of Pakistan's Begum Ahmed and Ceylon's Lady Gunewardene, the exquisite kimona of Japan's Madame Asakai and the native shama of tiny Madame Imru of Ethiopia which drew a Presidential compliment.

Beauteous Jacqueline Kennedy, who received with her husband in the Blue Room, wore a chic, deep pink brocade suit with short jacket and slim skirt. Her jewelry included a pearl necklace, diamond and pearl earrings and a diamond-studded bracelet.

Little Caroline Kennedy, in white organza party dress embroidered in bands of dainty pink rosebuds, delighted guests as she stood enraptured by the U.S. Marine Band playing in the foyer. In the tiny charmer's honor, Conductor Colonel Albert Schoepper directed in proper classical mood "Syncopated Clock" and "Old MacDonald Had a Farm."

The annual Presidential Prayer Breakfast at the Mayflower Hotel brought out top echelon speakers, President Kennedy, Billy Graham and Vice President Johnson. Senator Frank Carlson (second left) was chairman of the impressive event, sponsored by the International Leadership Conference.

When the President and Mrs. Kennedy had received their guests, they moved into the State Dining Room where they mingled and chatted for some forty-five minutes. Cabinet members and their wives were on hand to greet diplomats. The First Lady's Social Secretary Letitia Baldrige, wearing a smart cocktail gown of deep green velvet and satin, was in the company and the President's White House Aides were assisting. Brigadier General Chester Clifton escorted Mrs. Kennedy as she moved through the throng and Commander Tazewell Shepard accompanied the President while Colonel Godfrey McHugh presented guests.

Vice President and Mrs. Johnson and Secretary of State and Mrs. Rusk assisted in receiving the guests and then joined in the greetings in the dining room. The President's brother Attorney General Robert Kennedy visited with many of the ambassadors in whose countries he had visited. His vivacious wife Ethel in a very attractive white lace dress moved through the company seeing many she knew. First Ambassador that visited with the President was Mexico's Carillo Flores, who was on hand at the White House a few days later for the report of the Inter-American Parliamentary group that met in Guadalajara and brought greetings to Mr. Kennedy from the Mexican President. Danish Ambassador and Countess Knuth-Winterfeldt had several moments with the Chief Executive, no doubt discussing the visit of the Danish Prime Minister Viggo Kampmann, who was a White House luncheon guest a few days later, with the Ambassador among those present. Another diplomatic couple who were later White House visitors was Irish Ambassador and Mrs. Thomas Kiernan, who presented President and Mrs. Kennedy a charming silver christening cup for baby JFK Jr. from the people of County Wexford, Ireland, where the President's great-grandfather was born. The ceremony took place in the Diplomatic Reception Room with a return gift from the President — a portion of plank from the Inaugural platform with a sterling silver plate bearing the inscription: "With greetings and appreciation to County Wexford, Ireland. J. F. Kennedy, President of the United States."

Guests were delighted at the reception to hear the lovely First Lady speaking several languages to diplomatic wives. Among the many present were the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps and Senora de Sevilla-Sacasa, the Latin Dean and Senora de Castro, the Peruvian Ambassador and Senora de Berckemeyer, who were wedding guests at the Kennedy nuptials, the Portuguese Ambassador and Senhora de Esteves-Fernandes, the Iceland Ambassador and Madame Thors, the British Ambassador and Lady Caccia, the French Ambassador and Madame Alphand, who were greeted by Mr. Kennedy with "Comment ca va"? The Ambassador of Germany and Madame Grewe were there. The President and the Ambassador had several minutes exchange on the visit of the German Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano, who was a caller at the White House less than a week later. Veteran statesman Carlos Romulo of the Philippines and Madame Romulo drew the presidential remark: "Greetings. You've been here at the White House more times than I have." Ambassador and Madame Platzer were guests, Russian Ambassador and Madame Menshikov, Italian Ambassador and Signora Brosio, Luxembourg Envoy and Madame Heisbourg, and Iran's Envoy Ardeshir Zahedi and his beautiful Princess Shahnaz, daughter of the Shah. Ambassadors who came away from a few words with the President reporting his interest in their countries included Finland's Seppala, Spain's Yturralde, Libya's Fekini and Ecuador's Ponce L. Senora de Ponce L. was pleased when Mr. Kennedy noticed the St. Anthony charm she was wearing and hoped her prayers included him.

Guests sipped champagne or took tea or coffee and sampled the array of party foods on the long, lace covered table centered with silver bowls of full-bloom yellow tulips. Floral arrangements in all the rooms of the Mansion were especially effective in their simplicity and combination of colors.

Ambassador Averill Harriman was among guests, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Mennen Williams and the U.S. Chief of Protocol Ambassador Angier Biddle Duke and his pretty wife. Three diplomatic guests expressed the reactions of many of those present. Madame Louis Scheyven, wife of the Belgian Ambassador: "Superbe! Absolument Superbe!" Senora de Muller, the Chilean Ambassador's wife: "A party done with such ease and elegance." And Australian Ambassador Howard Beale: "Great! Simply great!"

Texas Representative and Mrs. Clark Thompson were hosts at the first large private reception that drew the Presidential presence. Entertaining in their handsome Massachusetts Avenue house for Speaker Sam Rayburn, the popular lawmaker and his heiress wife (Libby Moody) received President Kennedy to the delight of their several hundred assembled guests. To many it was a complete and thrilling surprise. Libby, in a slim gold brocade gown with white orchids clipped to the shoulder, received with her husband, the Speaker and his sister Mrs. S. E. Bartley at the entrance to the drawing room and guests found their way on into the other rooms for champagne and cocktails and a wonderful buffet featuring a standing roast of beef, fresh shrimp and crab, fruits and pastries.

When the young, handsome President arrived hatless in an immaculately tailored gray suit, pale blue shirt and blue striped tie, a battery of cameramen descended upon him as he was welcomed by his hosts. After greeting the Speaker and Mrs. Bartley warmly, Mr. Kennedy moved into the throng accompanied by his secret servicemen and Mrs. Thompson. He had greetings and words for everyone who could get near him. He talked to Bill Foster, former Deputy Administrator of ECA, to Brigadier General Bill Ritchie, who was presented by Ambassador Averill Harriman, to Donald Dawson, a former presidential counsel; to Republican Edgar Morris and to Pan American's vice president Carroll Cone. He stopped and talked several minutes to Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, widow of the well-known lawmaker of Illinois. He chatted with Hale Boggs, the Congressman from Louisiana, with Texas' Dale Miller and Representative and Mrs. Bob Casey of Texas. Katie Malone, wife of the former Republican Senator from Nevada, gave the President a kiss and Alabama's Representative Frank Boykin said "God Bless You" after his words with Mr. Kennedy. The Presidential route through the Thompson house ended in the Texas Room downstairs where the Vice President and Mrs. Johnson waited to see the President. There the Diplomatic Dean and Senora de Sevilla-Sacasa congratulated him on his Inaugural Address. From there the Chief Executive was escorted through the kitchen out to his White House limousine where his host Clark Thompson replied to the President's thanks: "I hope you can return at a more leisurely time, Mr. President."

A large turnout from Capitol Hill included Senator and Mrs. Fulbright, Senator and Mrs. McClellan, Senator and Mrs. Yarborough, Senator and Mrs. Hickenlooper, Senator and Mrs. Sparkman, Senator and Mrs. Kefauver, Senator "Scoop" Jackson, Senator Maurine Neuberger, Senator and Mrs. Frank Church, Representative and Mrs. Homer Thornberry, Representative and Mrs. Hale Boggs, Representative Paul Rogers, Representative James Fulton, Representative and Mrs. Jack Brooks and others.

Among diplomats we saw British Ambassador and Lady Caccia, Denmark's Ambassador and Countess Knuth-Winterfeldt, Iceland Ambassador and Madame Thors, Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Muller, Chinese Ambassador George Yeh and Spain's General Benito Miranda, who talked to President Kennedy about his country and came away impressed with the interest the President showed. From the Cabinet were Postmaster General Day and Commerce Secretary and Mrs. Hodges. Mr. and Mrs. H. Malcolm Baldrige, whose daughter Letitia (Tish) is Mrs. Kennedy's Social Secretary, were in the company, U. S. Chief of Protocol and Mrs. Duke, Major General and Mrs. Conger Pratt, Mrs. Jorje Zalles, who was telling friends she would soon be off to Florida and then a trip to the Mid-East. Others included Mrs. Clarence Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Mack, Clarence Hughes, Colonel Fred Roy, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gardner, Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Peggy and Bob Le Baron, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Murphy, the Homer Gruenthers, the James Kems, Meade and Clare Patrick and many more. A brilliant party with that magic ingredient, the visit of the President of the United States!

THE AMBASSADOR OF INDIA and Madame Mahomedali Chagla were the first diplomatic couple honored by a Presidential acceptance. Mr. Kennedy attended a gala invitational showing of India's prize-winning film "The World of Apu" at Washington's Dupont Theatre with high-ranking diplomats, officials, members of Congress and socialites in attendance. Mrs. Kennedy, who had also accepted the invitation, was forced by a cold to cancel plans at the last minute. As a result, the young President came in the company of longtime friends, Senator and Mrs. John Sherman Cooper. The Senator is a former Ambassador to India. President Kennedy, who had sent his White House limousine to pick up the Coopers and come by for him, alighted from the car in black tie and strode into the theatre in a flood of klieg lights. He was welcomed at the entrance by Dupont Manager Gerald Wagner and Chief of Protocol Duke and then by the "Welcome, Mr. President" of Ambassador Chagla. He was greeted in the line by Madame Chagla, Indian Minister D. N. Chatterjee and Mrs. Wagner. Inside the theatre he sat between the Chaglas with the Ambassador of France and Madame Alphand in front of him and the Coopers behind.

Opening ceremonies included a welcome by Mr. Wagner which expressed appreciation for the President's interest in the theatre. The Ambassador followed with his thanks for Mr. Kennedy's continued interest in India and concluded his eloquent remarks with: "Mr. President, my country and the world of art and culture are honored by your presence here this evening."

It was a brilliant, well-dressed audience which included the newly-appointed Ambassador to India and Mrs. J. Kenneth Galbraith, Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps and Senora de Sevilla-Sacasa, the Commerce Secretary and Mrs. Hodges, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Mrs. Lyman Lemnitzer, Senate Majority Leader and Mrs. Mike Mansfield with her sister Mrs. Maurice Scanton, Sir William and Lady Iliff of the International Bank, Budget Director and Mrs. David Bell, Representative and Mrs. Clark Thompson, International Monetary Fund Chief and Mrs. Per Jacobsson, Special Counsel to the President Ted Sorenson, Press Secretary and Mrs. Pierre Salinger, Social Secretary Letitia Baldrige with the George Wheelers, and UAR Ambassador Kamel, all of whom had been dinner guests of Senator and Mrs. Cooper. From residential circles we saw Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Jouett Shouse and Dr. and Mrs. Robert Richman. From press circles came Mr. and Mrs. Marquis Childs, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lindley, Mrs. Roscoe Drummond and Lawrence Spivak. Many went on after the showing to a supper party at the Indian Embassy. Among them Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Lewis Jones, Senator and Mrs. John Sparkman, Senator and Mrs. Frank Church, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Shelton of the USIA, and from Embassy Row Ambassador and Mrs. Beale, Ambassador and Begum Ahmed, Ambassador and Madame Maiwandwal, the Ambassador of Iran and Princess Shahnaz, Ambassador and Mrs. Harman, Ambassador and Senora de Carrillo Flores, Ambassador and Madame Usakligil, Ambassador and Senora de Muller and a number more.

It was an evening to remember and one that undoubtedly will be cherished by the popular Ambassador and his gentle lady Madame Chagla. Friends are sad at the news that they depart Washington in early Summer.

Beach Club Hotel

Naples-on-the-Gulf, Florida

By ELFREDA C. JENKINS

ENDLESS DAYS of cloudless skies and balmy southern breezes have contributed to the most delightful vacation at the Beach Club Hotel in many a year. Although the focal point of activity during the season has been on the championship golf course, increased interest has been noticed on the top-notch tennis courts and the swimming pool area as more and more young people arrive to spend their Spring vacations. Facilities of the hotel have been filled as the guests sunned or shelled on the beach, bathed in the warm waters of the Gulf or enjoyed the many pleasures in the pool area: Cards or luncheon in the lanai, lounging around the pool or a swim in the pool itself. Lawn bowling and shuffleboard near the beach furnish popular evening activity, as well as daytime tournaments.

Added to the usual evening entertainment of movies and cards was a concert by Romolo de Spirito, Metropolitan Opera star who performed in the Gulf Terrace Room of the Beach Club Hotel.

This year will mark the sixteenth visit of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Clarke of Yonkers, N. Y. They have watched the Beach Club grow from a simple golfing club to one of the most popular Winter resorts of the Gulf Coast and the golfing capital of Southwest Florida.

Following the social season, the Beach Club Hotel will again be in demand for conventions and group meetings, as well as golf tournaments. The Notre Dame Alumni Association will hold its annual meeting at the Beach Club Hotel this Spring, and many events are being planned. The Kiwanis State Convention will be held in Naples this season also, headquarters being at the Naples Hotel.

The State Loan and Finance Company will return for the fourth year with six days of meetings and social events on the calendar. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company will have another three-day group meeting. Merkel Company of St. Petersburg, the Buyers Sellers Association of West Palm Beach, and the Estate Planning Council of Southeast Florida have chosen the Beach Club Hotel for their annual meeting this Spring.

The Second Annual Press Golf Tournament, played by members of the radio, television and newspaper industry, will be held in May. The great enthusiasm displayed by this group after their first play predicts a greatly increased attendance this year.

The Metropolitan Amateur Golf Association of Miami has planned a 36-hole event on the Beach Club golf course, also in May, with approximately one hundred of their members participating.

FORT LAUDERDALE SOCIETY

By MARGARET WALKER

THE PARTY ROUND went merrily on in Fort Lauderdale with a few formal flings and many cocktail "dos" continuing the lively Winter pace right into early Spring.

Among the big parties was a cocktail buffet for three hundred friends given by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Ogle at the Lauderdale Yacht Club in honor of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Shafer of Ridgefield, Conn. Mrs. Shafer is the former Jamie Ogle.

That same evening the Coral Ridge Yacht Club was the scene of a top brass dinner Navy Leaguers gave in honor of Admiral Arleigh Burke, chief of Naval Operatoins and commanding officer of the U.S. Navy. Admiral Burke flew in from Puerto Rico for the occasion, which assembled an all-male gathering of the League and friends. Chairman was Bill Richards, assisted by Dr. John Lietchy, Carl Sholtz, Hal Braman and Ralph Caulley. The distinguished honor guest was introduced by Harry Greep, president of the local Navy League.

After their fancy Commodores Ball honoring Commodore Howard Ellery, members of the Coral Ridge Yacht Club relaxed the following weekend with plain loafing and some informal partying at the Ocean Reef Club. A flotilla of thirty yachts kept the rendezvous in Key Largo.

Mrs. Marie Kresge welcomed friends from Delray Beach, Pompano Beach and Miami as well as Lauderdale at a brunch in late February at the Lauderdale Yacht Club.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Krider hosted a cocktail buffet at their handsome Del Lago Island home honoring their Ohio houseguests, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Frohman. The Herbert Goulds entertained a group of General Motors executives, both active and retired, at a dinner party at their home.

Another midseason social event was a party the Stanley Kirks had at their home on Laguna Isle. A raft of Northern visitors joined Lauderdaleans when Mr. and Mrs. Ivan S. Brownlee hosted a reception at their lovely house on Del Lago.

On the cultural side, pianist Cyrus Ullian began his inimitable musical-lectures, eleventh in the series, at his charming home in Coral Ridge. Honor guest for the first concert was Mrs. Robert Elliott of Miami, who was a popular "pioneer" of Harbor Beach when she lived in Fort Lauderdale.

She originated the series, and during her visit here in February and early March she was houseguest of Mrs. Howard Jones, cofounder of the musical events.

Current chairman of Mr. Ullian's informal concerts is Mrs. Louis McCauley. Other committee members include Mrs. John McGill, Mrs. Margaret Wakeman, Mrs. Lionel Frank, Mrs. Robert Woolsey, Mrs. John Russell, Mrs. Ellen Merriman of Pompano Beach and Miss Beatrice Hodge.

A round of small parties were a send-off for Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Bottorff, who sailed for the Orient March eighteenth on the President Hoover from San Francisco. Mr. Bottorff, former president and co-owner of National Concert Artists Corporation, and Mrs. Bottorff, plan to go half way around the world on a leisurely jaunt which will return them to their apartment in the Edgewater Arms in early Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Vogt christened their stunning new home in Boca Raton with a cocktail and dinner party which assembled friends from their hometown, Weston, Conn., as well as Fort Lauderdale, Boca and Palm Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. George Stebbins honored her brother, E. Fred Johnson, president of the Tulsa Bank, and Mrs. Johnson at a party at their home in Coral Ridge. Sharing honors were more kin, Mr. and Mrs. Stowell C. Stebbins of Marshall, Mich.

Among interesting visitors here from Europe this season was Dr. Walter Sixt of Linz, Upper Austria, who came to Lauderdale to see his friend, the noted painter, Frederick Sprague. Dr. Sixt, doctor of internal medicine and of economics, was honored at several informal parties before leaving for Mexico.

Mr. Sprague's studio, filled with his outstanding works of art, including portraits of well-known personalities, attracts the elite of the art world.

Formerly married to the Princess Charles Murat of Paris and New York, Mr. Sprague painted the Princess (nee Margaret Stuyvesant Rutherford) and his late mother-in-law, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt. Many film stars he knew when he lived in Hollywood and in Europe have sat for Mr. Sprague, who spent ten years on the Continent before coming to Florida.

Hundreds of boats from the North have migrated to the Bahia Mar Yacht Basin, berth of many of the world's luxurious yachts. There for the season aboard their Gee Bee II are Mr. and Mrs. George D. Besler of New York and Oyster Bay, L.I., who are annual visitors. Their attractive houseguest, Mrs. John C. Barrows of East Norwich, L.I., was toasted at several parties during her early Spring stay with the Beslers.

The Admiral's flag was raised aboard the yacht Agrado, by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Richardson Jr., who hosted a party for visiting Rear Adm. R. O. Glover (Ret.) and Mrs. Glover. Another "Navy" guest was Rear Adm. Kendall Reed (Ret.) and Mrs. Reed, of Massachusetts, who Winter at Bahia Mar aboard their boat.

A chance meeting in the Oak Room of the Plaza one lunch-time last January has led to the lending of a painting by Murillo, the seventeenth century Spanish master, to the Fort Lauderdale Art Center. The work is "The Infant of St. John the Baptist and the Lamb," loaned by Eric H. A. Teran of New York, head of the Jim Nash industrial design organization.

Mr. Teran is a frequent visitor in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Stephan of Fort Lauderdale. Through an encounter at the Plaza with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kinney (She's a member of the Beaux Arts, supporting organization for the Art Center), likewise friends of the Stephens, Mr. Teran learned of the Center's desire for fine paintings for a permanent exhibit. From his collection, which includes a Gainsborough and a Duffy, among others, he loaned the Murillo.

The Stephans are supporters of the Art Center, and Mr. Teran added his own name to the roster, too.

Changing its usual place on the social calendar from the start of the season to Spring this year, the Symphony Ball will be held April eighth at the Governors' Club Hotel. This gala, marking its sixth anniversary, will honor the city's fiftieth anniversary. Chairman, Mrs. Scott L. Moore, and co-chairman, Mrs. Paris Singer, have consulted with the town pioneers in order to theme the ball in perfect accord with costumes and customs of 1911 when Fort Lauderdale was a village.

Mrs. John H. Godfrey, chairman of arrangements, has planned a menu according to one used in the White House fifty years ago. The delectable dishes of those days will be served at midnight, with supper parties in various rooms surrounding the ballroom.

Invitations and reservations are in the hands of Mrs. Karl Klauser, Mrs. Otto Holmedal and Mrs. George A. Stebbins.

Mrs. Samuel W. Poore heads the sponsors and patrons committee. Mrs. William B. Young is coordinator.

There's a hand for every task aboard the craft competing in the Seventh Annual Out Island Regatta as the big sloops race in close quarters through the choppy waters of the Atlantic during the "island race" around Stocking Island. The races are limited to the hand-crafted sail boats which spend the balance of the year serving as mainstays of inter-island transportation throughout the British Bahamas. More than $3,000 in prizes is offered each Spring in the Regatta. Second—Yachtsmen and boating enthusiasts gather at the Club Peace and Plenty for the annual Out Island Regatta. A fleet of more than 75 spectator yachts throng the harbor at George Town to watch the race and to share in the festivities. Third—Keen competition marked races during the Seventh Annual Out Island Regatta.

Rugged Crews In Trading Sloops to become Yachtsmen For A Day

By BILL WINGET

George Town, Exuma—Rugged crews of Bahamian trading sloops accustomed to playing nursemaid to cargoes of conch and cabbage will drop the role of sea-going businessmen April 20-23 and become deep water yachtsmen in the Eighth Annual Out Island Regatta.

Only sailboats, built and manned by Bahamians, normally spending their time bringing fish and tropical produce from the Out Islands to the Nassau market are eligible to compete in this colorful contest.

Held every year in the roomy, hill-bordered harbor at George Town, Exuma, the regatta is expected to draw some seventy-five Bahamian sailing craft ranging from small dinghies, which scuttle from wave crest to wave crest, to sturdy trading sloops with crews of a dozen or more.

Nearly one hundred spectator yachts will cruise to George Town to watch the Bahamian boats compete for more than $3,000 in prizes—big money in anybody's pocketbook, but especially for Bahamian sailors who eke out a hard-earned living sailing among these isles of June.

Bahamian trading sailboats cruise without engines among the seven hundred Bahama Islands and cays—which range in size from land masses over a hundred miles long to some little bigger than a rowboat—with no navigational equipment except a battered compass.

How do they do it in this era of radar, ship-to-shore telephones, depth recorders and directional finders? The answer is sailing skill and an intimate knowledge of crystalline Bahamian waters handed down from father to son.

Much navigation is accomplished simply by peeping over the boat's side through the clear seawater to the ocean bottom—which in Bahamian waters is seldom more than forty feet below the boat's keel.

By nothing the types of seabottom—sand, grass, mud, or coral—the currents and even the water's color, Bahamian sailors can usually pinpoint their position even though they've not seen land for several days.

Using only their knowledge of the sea bottom, winds and currents, Bahamian sloops sail to the north coast of Cuba, a voyage of nearly three hundred miles from Nassau, much of it far from the sight of land.

Some of the trading sloops have small, battery-powered radios aboard to pick up Nassau's commercial radio station. These radios occasionally serve as crude navigational aids.

Jarvis Darville

Though the dog on the cabin roof doesn't appear too happy about things, everyone else is getting ready to begin one of the races for the large sloops during the Seventh Annual Out Island Regatta. Boats start with anchors out, sails down, then scramble to hoist hook and canvas when the starting gun booms.

As one sloop captain explained, "When we close to Nassau de radio play loud, when we far off it not so loud."

At dusk when the seabottom becomes invisible beneath the waves gilded golden by the sunset, Bahamian helmsmen start steering by the stars and well-known constellation patterns glowing against the black velvet of the tropic night.

The stars and the feel of the wind on his cheek is all the helmsman needs to steer a steady course until dawn once again brings the sea bottom into view for a check of position.

The Out Island Regatta is carefully scheduled to fall during the interval between busy periods in the fishing season and at a time when the farm crops need little attention. During this slack period Bahamians from all the islands are free to attend.

Several days before the regatta begins sloops laden with wives, children, girl friends, dogs and a fair sprinkling of chickens and goats begin heading for George Town.

Upon their arrival a steady hubbub of conversation and socializing begins which gives George Town Harbour, bisected by the Tropic of Cancer, the look and sound of a sea-going coffee klatch.

Once the regatta begins socializing and gaiety swell to a convivial roar and the whole proceedings begin to assume the more enjoyable aspects of New Year's Eve, Mardi Gras and a bargain basement fire sale.

Sports events such as track and field contests are staged and the Bahamian crewman not sailing that day may win himself a prize in such non-nautical activities as the hundred yard dash or high jump.

Boxing and wrestling events are held for the entertainment of the regatta spectators and a giant tug-of-war contest gives everybody a chance to let off steam straining over a rope.

Even small fry have a chance to pocket a prize in three-legged races, potato races and similar contests.

At night George Town swings. Calypso bands gladden the night air with vibrating guitars and the throb and thump of congo drums. Happy crowds of dancers bounce and rock the night away to the pelvis popping, hip swinging beat of the merengue.

George Town's Club Peace and Plenty, which at various times has been a slave market, sponge market, grocery store and rum shop, spawns a continuous round of dances, cocktail parties, luncheons and dinner parties for the regatta's yacht-borne spectators.

On race days the trading sloops anchor along the starting line with their sails furled. At the sound of the cannon they raise their sails and anchors at the same time while managing to avoid smashing into each other — a minor miracle that never fails to amaze spectators.

Racing rules are simple — boats meeting head to head must tack and boats rounding a buoy must keep clear. After that it depends on the skill of the crew and the helmsman's steady hand.

On downwind legs the racers pile on extra canvas with a wild abandon that leaves the more conventional blue-water yachtsmen gasping.

Bahamian sloop skippers and their crews hoist two, sometimes three, sails borrowed from large dinghies and go barreling downwind like a bunch of sea-going tumbleweeds.

For younger sailors there are dinghy races requiring the ultimate in seamanship and small boat tactics.

One of the most unusual events is a sculling race. Here hard-muscled Bahamians stand up in their dinghies and rotate a long oar protruding over the stern in a figure-eight pattern — a method of propulsion also used by New England lobstermen.

Jarvis Darville

Naomi B, the small dinghy nearest camera, won the Class E championship during the Seventh Annual Out Island Regatta at George Town, Exuma. With Capt. Charles Bain of Mangrove Cay, Andros, at her tiller, Naomi B won two races, finished second in another. These races, for the working sail boats of the British Bahamas, are conducted each Spring at the pleasant community of George Town.

Bahamian scullers skim their craft over the waves at speeds that send up impressive bow waves and can leave motorboats wallowing in their wakes.

The high point in the Out Island Regatta history came in 1959 when Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh, was a spectator.

The Duke, a sportsman sailor himself, took the tiller of the sloop Lady Muriel after she won the regatta and sailed her around the harbor. The tiller is now properly enshrined at Staniel Cay, Exuma, the sloop's home port.

Originating the Out Island Regatta in 1954 were Robert H. (Bobby) Symonette, a competitive sailor of international renown and Exuma representative in the Bahamas House of Assembly, and J. Linton Rigg, American author and yachtsman who lives on an island retreat near George Town.

These two gentlemen envisaged the regatta as an opportunity to encourage and develop seafaring skills among Bahamians — skills that were passing into oblivion in the Bahamas with the growing popularity of power boats.

Another purpose of the regatta was to provide for the trading sloop fleet an incentive for having soundly-constructed, well-maintained sailboats.

The late Ward Wheelock, distinguished American yachtsman lost in Atlantic waters, also joined Symonette and Rigg in their project. A trophy is given annually in his memory by Yachting Magazine to the best-kept, non-new boat, reflecting Wheelock's high standards of seamanship and maintenance.

In previous years a race from Mangrove Cay, Andros to George Town, run just before the regatta has served as an appetizer for the main event.

This preliminary race is usually entered by some of the larger sloops competing in the regatta.

The Out Island Regatta is one of those unique events peculiar to the Bahamas.

Where else but in this archipelago could you see some of the world's richest, most sophisticated yachtsmen in their vessels designed and built by the finest nautical talent watching a race among humble native sailors whose crafts' design and sailing techniques have not changed in two hundred years.

Worth Avenue Gallery Features Local Artists

The Worth Avenue Gallery, a landmark of the Palm Beach art world, will close its eighteenth season under the direction of Mrs. Duggett Benson with an exhibition of paintings and sculpture by fifteen American artists.

Culminating a highly successful season, the exhibition will be previewed with a cocktail party on Sunday afternoon, April second, after which it will be shown through April thirteenth. Mrs. Benson and her associates John Baggs and John Hawkins, will receive at the preview which is expected to attract a number of noted artists and prominent members of the Winter colony.

The work of many young, vital and imaginative painters will be featured in the show. Each distinctive in style, they are Patrick Archer, Charles Blum, O'Connor Barrett, John Cobb, Paul Crosthwaite, Henry Faulkner, Janet Folsom, John Hawkins, Hopkins Hensel, John Sharp, Mary Ellen Shipnes, Howard Silverman and Robert Zimmerman.

Grover Hendrick's sculpture, which has received extraordinary praise in earlier shows at the gallery, and a group of contemporary porcelains by Mrs. William T. Young Jr. will also be featured.

The exhibit is considered one of the most distinguished shows to be presented in Palm Beach this year. For it brings together the exciting work of comparatively new artists with those who are more established and in many cases have won international recognition.

SARASOTA

By MARIAN MURRAY

If Giaocchino Antonio Rossini had been in Sarasota on February eighteenth, he might have looked with astonishment at twentieth century mink stoles and Paris gowns. He might have been somewhat confused to hear his opera sung in English. And he might have been baffled by electric lights and other phenomena become commonplace since his time.

Otherwise, he would certainly have felt comfortably at home during the performance of his "La Cenerentola," which marked the gala opening of the Turnau Opera Players' 1961 season in the Ringling Museum's Asolo Theater.

Rossini's music may well have been sung in that tiny, horseshoe-shaped playhouse not so long after it was built (at the end of the eighteenth century) in the Italian town of Asolo, north of Venice. For its adaptation to an American setting, astonishingly few changes have been made in the appearance of the theater, which was imported a decade ago, and acquired its own functional shell in 1958. A portrait of Caterina Cornaro, who ruled Asolo at the end of the fifteenth century, and in whose memory the playhouse was built, still looks down with regal benevolence from above the large central box in the lowest tier. An air of intimacy, luxury and elegance still pervades the whole.

For the Opera Gala, with which the month of opera opened, Robert B. Van Skike Jr., of the Members' Council of the Ringling Museum, created a social event that drew an enthusiastic audience from Sarasota, Bradenton, St. Petersburg and other nearby cities. The young artists coped skillfully with the demanding music Rossini created for his comedy version of the Cinderella story, which has no pumpkin or fairy godmother, makes a grotesque stepfather responsible for all the dirty work at the crossroads, and uses a bracelet instead of a slipper, to initiate the romantic denouement.

At the conclusion of the performance, the audience went on to the Sarasota Bay Country Club, where festivities included a supper party, dancing, and unscheduled, delightful solos by members of the Turnau company.

Among Bradentonians who came for the event were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wooten Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wooten Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Cone, Mrs. George J. Searle, Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Van Skike Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reed Talley, Dr. and Mrs. W. D. Sugg, Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Turbeville, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harden, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Meyers, Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Wentzel, Mrs. Z. H. Patterson, Joseph Davies, Mrs. Frederick Patry and Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Whitaker.

Other out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Poynter, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Flanagan and Mr. and Mrs. David Kennerson of St. Petersburg, and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Lasbury of Englewood.

Before another such big social ? ? ? rolls around, the name of the sponsoring organization will undoubtedly have been officially changed to one that will be more suitable to its non-commercial functions. The reason for the change is all mixed up with the fact that the Museum is State-owned, and there are wheels within larger wheels when it comes to sale of tickets and such.

Seven of the ten Sarasotans who admitted the public to their houses for "Distinguished Homes" days this year, under the auspices of the Founders Circle of the Sarasota Garden Club, were guests at a luncheon given by the Circle at the home of the president, Mrs. William L. Adams. Some thirty persons were present, in the spacious and impressive house which itself, in another season, was chosen as a Distinguished Home.

The emblem — a sundial — designed and created by the Kreissle Forge of Sarasota, was presented to the 1961 hostesses by Mrs. Edward J. Seibert, general chairman for this year's event. In making presentation of dials and certificates, Mrs. Seibert spoke of the way in which their homes show the gracious coordination of architectural beauty, excellence of decor, and successful blending of outdoor-indoor living.

At Mrs. Adams's, on hand to receive the insignia, were Mrs. Kent K. McKinley, Mrs. Richard P. Doyle, Mrs. T. H. Mitchell, Mrs. William Ingler, Mrs. Arthur T. Goodman, Mrs. Andrew Terry and Mrs. Jack Close. Mrs. Percy Leon, Mrs. Leonard Florsheim and Mrs. J. P. Trouchaud were not there, though they also opened their homes. Mr. and Mrs. Leon were in the West Indies. Mrs. Close had returned from Hawaii just in time for the event.

A prolonged ovation, marked by cries of "Bravo!," greeted Broadus Erle and the Florida West Coast Symphony Orchestra for their playing of the Brahms Violin Concerto in D Major — high spot of the Symphony's February concert.

The occasion marked the appearance as soloist of a musician who spent much of his boyhood and young manhood in Sarasota, and studied and worked with the Symphony's conductor, Alexander Bloch. For the past four years, Mr. Erle has been concertmaster of the Japan Philharmonic Symphony in Tokyo, and returned recently to teach at Yale. Though he is making no concert tours, he came to Florida on a flying visit, just to play the exceedingly demanding concerto, as a gesture of affection and appreciation toward the man who had helped and encouraged him during his student days.

The violinist's appearance was also in homage to Mr. Bloch's eleventh and last season as conductor. Though rumors have been flying thick and fast, and close friends were told some time ago of the forthcoming retirement of the much-loved leader, who is a national figure in music, official announcement was not made until shortly before the last concert of the season, on March seventeenth and eighteenth.

Members of the Symphony entertained for Mr. Erle and Mr. Bloch after the February concert, which soloist and conductor had helped to make one of the most successful during the Orchestra's career. Among other guests were: Mrs. Bloch (herself a well-known musician and authority on music history), the Blochs' daughter, Mrs. Robert Briggs, and their teen-age granddaughter, Meredith Briggs. Mrs. Briggs and Meredith flew down from their home in Bloomington, Ind., for the occasion. Though that meant Meredith's staying out of school for a week, the family agreed that 'it isn't every day you have a chance to see your grandfather conduct."

On Sunday afternoons, all season, cars have been chasing each other and crisscrossing between galleries on the mainland and the keys, stopping off at the openings of exhibitions. To get everything in, without arriving a week too early or a week too late for something or other, requires a firm grip on the calendar, planning, and pertinacity.

On the opening day of the group show of Representational Work at the Sarasota Art Association, Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Leech dashed back and forth across the several miles between their own studio and the galleries of the SAA.

At their studio, they opened an exhibition of the work of the late John Carroll, with Mrs. Carroll as guest of honor. At the SAA, they had to be on hand as prize winners. Mrs. Leech and Loran Wilford, also winners in the Abstract Show, which preceded the Representational, won two top prizes. As an additional honor, they will also participate in a group show during 1961-1962. Mr. Leech won the award given in memory of Clara Crum Fisk, by friends, through the Sarasota Branch of the National League of American Pen Women—a group which, incidentally, has been having its own exhibition at the Southside gallery of the Federal Savings and Loan.

Jurors for the SAA Representational Exhibition were Xavier Gonzales of New York and Miami, and Dr. Schubert Jonas, director of the Art Center at Fort Lauderdale. Honorable mentions went to Charles W. Anderson, Helen Auchterlonie, Helen Goodman, Mary W. Harris, Alice Rogers and Elden Rowland.

A memorial exhibition of the work of Wells M. Sawyer, father of Helen Sawyer Farnsworth, and for many years dean of Sarasota painters, opened with a reception on February eighteenth in the Kellogg Gallery of the Manatee Art Center, and ran for three weeks. Among the canvases were certain ones created about fifty years ago, when Mr. Sawyer first saw parts of Florida in their still largely unspoiled state. There were also a number of pictures made in Spain, where the Sawyers lived for several years.

Alejo Vidal-Quadras Has Exhibition Here

ONE OF THE HIGHLIGHTS of Palm Beach art activity was an exhibition of portraits by Spanish artist Alejo Vidal-Quadras recently presented at the Palm Beach Galleries, 336 Worth Avenue.

Mr. Vidal-Quadras and his wife, French film star Tilda Thamar, arrived in Palm Beach from Paris to attend the preview. They were the houseguests, at Beaumere, the ocean-front villa of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Vigoroux Jr. Mr. Vigoroux is director of the gallery and a member of its executive committee.

Born in Barcelona, Spain, the artist learned drawing and painting in his uncle's studio, the painter Jose Maria Vidal-Quadras of the Spanish Royal Academy; he continued his studies in the studio of Sainz de la Maza. He also qualifies as a lawyer, having qualified for that profession when he was in his early twenties.

A partial listing of persons he has painted include His Majesty King Umberto of Italy, Princess Maria Pia di Savoia, Princess Maria Garriella di Savoia, Princess Maria Beatricia di Savoia, Princess Anne of Denmark, His Royal Highness Don Alfonso of Spain, the Duchess of Windsor, Mrs. Loel Guiness, Mrs. Tina Onassis, Marquess of Portazo Portago, Miss Lindy Guiness, Princess Grace and her children, Mrs. Henry Fonda, Mrs. Earl E. T. Smith, Fred Weissman, Vicontesse de Rives and children, Egon Von Furstenberg, Miss Nonie Phipps, Mrs. John Cochran, Mr. and Mrs. Nate Cummings, and others.

Strenuous Hunting Trip Being Planned By Breakers Guest

Mrs. William Morden of Bronxville, N. Y., has been spending the month of February at The Breakers. During this pleasant period of relaxation, in great contrast to a luxury holiday in Palm Beach, she has been considering plans for a strenuous hunting trip abroad.

Last year Mrs. Morden arrived here following a hunt in the U.S.S.R. She was the first American, and the first woman, to hunt in the Crimea under a new plan provided by the government to interest sportsmen and sportswomen in visiting the U.S.S.R. Mrs. Morden obtained a large red deer which was mounted by Rowland Ward of London and later presented to the Peabody Museum of Yale University by Mrs. Morden. Upon her return from Russia last year, she further hunted in Arizona, bagging her third cougar and first black bear.

This year Mrs. Morden had hoped to collect specimens in Ethiopia for the Peabody Museum, but due to unsettled conditions in that country, she compromised by coming again to the fabulous Breakers, this time before another trip instead of after one. Since arrival Mrs. Morden has received a communication from Air France concerning a new trophy award to be made by that company on an annual basis for "the best elephant and buffalo obtained within the three African territories of Kenya, Tanganyika and Uganda." The trophy sponsored by Air France will be the reproduction of the elephant or buffalo in silver – not life size!

Another interesting letter came concerning a chamois hunt in Austria, and also a letter from the former President of the South West Africa Hunters Association inviting her to hunt kudu on an African Farm.

A tiger shoot in Hyderabad, India, had also been a possibility on Mrs. Morden's program for late March, but that invitation came a little too late for acceptance this year. And, lastly, a few nights ago came a long distance call from Arizona, her former hunter Curtis Prock, was urging a Mexican safari for jaguar!

With such a wealth of opportunities for adventure, Mrs. Morden commented that Palm Beach, with its social and cultural advantages, provides an elegant springboard for a plunge into the wilds of any country back of beyond.

PONTE VEDRA

By MARJORY STOUT

A BRIGHT HERALDING OF SPRING is making itself flambuoyantly apparent at Ponte Vedra. Gay and gorgeous Spring flowers are blooming in abundant profusion round and about the grounds at The Inn, and at the risk of sounding smug about anything so mercurial as the weather, it has been too consistently beautiful to forego mention of it.

The golf course is in marvelous condition and has seldom looked so beautiful. The lagoons entwine throughout the course like a shimmering necklace which catches the reflective lights of the sun. It is an experience of unmatched sporting challenge to play at Ponte Vedra, one of the finest golf courses in the world, and totally unexpected is the extent of its visual beauty.

The tennis courts have resounded throughout this lovely season with the wonderful Spring sound of ball-on-racquet, counterpointed with the shouts of tennis patter which waft through the air to complete the theme of Spring at Ponte Vedra.

Ponte Vedra's well known pro, Dave Drury, has been in a swirl of Spring activity, arranging games and giving instruction. Dave conducts each Tuesday morning a tennis clinic for both the guests and the colonists. His tennis knowledge and ability blend with his wonderfully relaxed and friendly personality to add up to instruction that improves even the most competent game.

The Inn was delighted to have Dr. and Mrs. Charles S. Draper of Cambridge, Mass., here as guests during the time that Dr. Draper gave three lectures in Jacksonville. Dr. Draper is a renowned astronauticist, head of the MIT Instrumentation Laboratory, and professor of astronomy and astronautics at MIT.

Loring Grimes, owner and innkeeper of the Colonial Inn at Concord, Mass., visited his brother, Luther Grimes, who is the general manager of Ponte Vedra's Inn.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Martin of Farmville, Va., were here for an extended stay. Mr. and Mrs. James Pope of Point Clear, Ala., basked in the lovely weather so graciously dispensed seemingly just for their honeymoon pleasure. Mr. Pope is resident manager of the Grand Hotel, Point Clear. Dr. and Mrs. J. C. PALM BEACH BILTMORE HOTEL

ENJOYING ITS ESTABLISHED PLACE in the social sun, and in the hearts of its seasonal Winter visitors, the majestic Palm Beach Biltmore Hotel continues to operate at peak capacity.

The new Cocktail Lounge and the new Coffee House have been alive with activity, and the Rib Room, where gourmets gather in the lower lobby of the Hotel, accessible both from Bradley Place and the Hotel Arcade on the street level, has been host to notables from Europe and our own fifty states.

Wednesday and Saturday Night Galas added considerable gaiety to the social programming and George Washington's Birthday Ball was one of the season's top events.

An added feature at Palm Beach Biltmore was the Cocktail-Dancing Hour, which began in February, and became a delightful prelude to dinner. Especially effective was the setting, with moonlit tropical skies overhead and the lush tropical planting around the Cabana Terrace and the pool, where the guests danced on and on, to the lilting strains of Ruby Newman's Orchestra.

The Champagne Hour, always a popular event on Friday evening at the Hotel, has enjoyed its rightful place with the Galas, at the top of the entertainment list. People still like to dance, and if they aren't top-flight dancers they are eager to try, especially with Verne Casanave and his Fred Astaire dancing group, Renata Estes, Maria Linden, Marvin North and Gianni D'Agostino. Verne Casanave hosts the Champagne Hour and directs the awarding of champagne to the two best dancers each Friday.

Daytime activities reached a new high during the past few weeks with the weather outdoing itself each day and drawing the guests in ever increasing numbers to the Sun and Surf Club, on the ocean, and to the golf courses, and into the Hotel pool.

Despite airline strikes, blizzards, and other transportation hazards sunlovers found their way to Palm Beach by train and by car. And come they did to make this, Felix H. Standen's first year as general manager and the Hotel's second social season under the Hotel Corporation of America's ownership, the busiest Winter on record.

From all indications already evident in the number of advance reservations for next year's Winter season, 1962 shows promise of being a "Record Topper."

This famous landmark offers a wealth of facilities that meet social and business demands, such as the Main Ballroom used recently by Jackie Gleason for his live TV show.

Fashion shows, lectures, card games, putting contests, tennis matches, swimming meets, shuffleboard and golf, bicycle tours, shell hunting or acquiring a conversational-tan while lunching on the Cabana Terrace, complete the tropical Winter schedule of fun in the sun at the Palm Beach Biltmore.

Findlay Galleries -- Largest in Florida

NINETY-ONE YEARS and four generations ago, art pioneer William Wadsworth Findlay opened the first Findlay Galleries in Kansas City, Missouri. In 1932, the firm expanded to Chicago where a gallery was established on Michigan Avenue under the management of the oldest member of the third generation, W. C. Findlay Jr. And in that same year the firm further expanded by opening a gallery on 57th Street in New York.

Last January leaders of the nation's art world turned their attention to the opening of Findlay Galleries in Palm Beach, a building hailed as one of the most beautiful and original of its kind in America.

Built by W. C. Findlay Jr., in memory of his grandfather, the new galleries are located on world famous Worth Avenue in an area now known as Findlay Plaza. The property comprises one-half block on South County Road, from Worth Avenue to Peruvian Avenue.

Costing over $1,000,000, exclusive of the art, the handsome building is the largest art gallery in Florida. But more significantly, over $1,000,000 worth of art including paintings by such masters as Renoir, Utrillo, Chagall, Picasso, Vlaminck, Buffet, Dufy, Brianchon, Foujita, to name a few, are included in the Findlay collection.

When viewing the paintings one critic remarked "this is the greatest thing that has happened to art in Florida since Deering founded Vizcaya at Miami and Ringling gave his museum in Sarasota to the state."

The building, which comprises three floors, is Regency in design. The actual galleries are located on the first floor; private living quarters and guest suites and studios for visiting artists and luminaries from international art circles, are located on the second floor and third floor penthouse.

Though the galleries stand as an impressive building, they are characterized throughout by simplicity of design. The exterior, superb in purest regency detail, is keynoted by broad black and white striped awnings, two massive black doors, and green, manicured shrubbery.

Six formal galleries and an executive office are located on the first floor. Each gallery is distinctive in itself. In the gallery fronting Worth Avenue and the opposite north exhibition room is a collection of paintings by modern French artists. They are furnished in modern pieces made and designed by Knoll Associates, of which Mrs. Florence Knoll was consultant with Mrs. Virginia Harvey Hamilton.

The main gallery and the Grand Hall Gallery are highlighted by eighteenth century English furniture. Two small, mahogany-panelled inner galleries, located on either side of the grand hallway, are used for special exhibitions.

The executive office, also mahogany-panelled, contains a group of Western paintings including works of Charles Russell, Frederick Remington and other artists.

The distinguished entrance hall to the upper floors is impressive in every detail. Two floors high, it features a graceful staircase (the building is also equipped with an elevator) and is highlighted by a rare eighteenth century hunt table and early Chippendale furniture.

Rich, wood panelling against the elegance of eighteenth century decor creates a handsome setting for the large living room on the second floor. The color scheme of soft beige and off whites is off-set by brilliant red damask used in the Chippendale chairs.

An English breakfront, made in 1830, is an extraordinary feature of the room. For, in addition to its beauty, it displays a collection of Doughty birds valued at $150,000. The collection, which is not for sale, belongs to the Tryphie Brown Findlay Memorial Collection which is being given by Mr. Findlay and his sister, Miss Helen Findlay, to an American museum in memory of their mother.

The drawing room, located on the second floor, is furnished in French and Eighteenth century English furniture. Paintings in the room, which is keyed to off shades of white, are Nineteenth and Twentieth century English masters.

Foyer leading to the second floor drawing room is superb in its rich regency detail. Pictured above is a view of an Eighteenth century Hunt Table, around which the room was designed. A painting of New York's Empire State Building by the French artist, Bernard Buffet, is also pictured.

The second floor also houses a dining room, kitchen and servants' quarters.

One of the most spectacular features of the building is the third floor penthouse which includes guest suites for visiting artists, dens, and a master bedroom. Each room opens onto an expansive terrace which runs the length of the building on Worth Avenue and on County Road.

Used primarily for entertaining, it features an originally designed dance floor in colors of black, white and gold and is covered with a black and white awning, the same as used on the ground floor.

Interior decorating was done by Mrs. Virginia Harvey Hamilton of Mrs. Julia Powell Harvey's firm, Fred Evans was the contractor, Wyeth, King and Johnson, the architects and Boynton Landscape Company did the planting.

Everglades Club Closing April 1st

To avoid scheduling a gala event on Good Friday, the Everglades Club is adding another day to its three months program of intensive social activity in the Orange Gardens.

This year, instead of the traditional March thirty-first ending, the closing party in the Gardens will be held Saturday night, April first, when once again a crowd as that welcoming both the Club's new season and 1961, will gather.

No longer a "Till We Meet Again" affair, the dinner dance will merely signalize that the season of formality is giving way to Springtime informality on the Golf Terrace.

It's been a gay Winter in the Orange Gardens with members and guests turning out in large numbers both for the weekly affairs and for the numerous big balls that are always high points of the Winter.

St. Valentine's Day fell on a Tuesday, so that the weekly backgammon buffet dinner gave way to a colorful "St. Valentine's Ball," with Lee Lawrence, sensational English singer as headliner attraction.

Since Washington's Birthday was one day removed from the regular Thursday evening party night, the ball for this occasion was held February twenty-third. Lanny Ross, perennial favorite in Palm Beach, returned to sing a special program as the high point of the evening's entertainment. He was houseguest while here of Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Marron.

March ninth was date for the Circus Ball, which as usual was preceded by the children's Circus party in the afternoon, when a number of oldsters who don't like to stay out late, joined the youngsters for the lakefront show. As usual in the evening, formally dressed members and guests gathered for dinner in the Orange Gardens, trailed out to perch on bleachers to watch the show afterwards.

On the night of March sixteenth, Club affairs gave way to the annual hospital benefit, for which the Everglades annually turns over its facilities once a year. This year it was "The Great Lady Ball" for St. Mary's and Pine Ridge Hospitals.

The death of Richard C. Heather early in the season brought sorrow to his friends and to those who knew him as originator and chairman for eleven years of the popular weekly putting tournaments at the Club. George Henri Boutet accepted appointment to the chairmanship, and the tournaments continued into their twelfth year, one of the most actively supported facets of the seasonal program.

Rolls-Royce Goes to a Party at The Colony Hotel

By MARION R. TAPPE

FEBRUARY TWENTY-FOURTH was a heavenly night for a party! Soft moonlight, gentle warm breezes, sweet music and a setting of beautifully controlled elegance poolside at The Colony Hotel, were all in order when S. Joseph Tankoos Jr. entertained at cocktails for Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gropper on their eighth wedding anniversary.

It will long be remembered as "The party that brought the house down!" – because it literally and physically did just that. Saluting Joseph Tankoos for his ingenious thought and statement of, "Knock the wall down," were Messrs. Rolls-Royce Inc., who were able to accept their invitation to appear when the poolside gate turned out to be too narrow for the three Rolls-Royces to ascend to the pool area.

All Photos—Mort Kaye Studios

Activity for "The party that brought the house down, started when Raymond Salisbury-Jones, from the Rolls-Royce Ltd. Promotional Sales Division, drove up to the door of The Colony Hotel in Palm Beach with his Silver Cloud.

Obviously the wall could come down as Ledyard Gardner points to it, with E. L. Roberts, chief engineer, Mrs. Harold Kaufman, Mrs. Ralph Sleicher and Nelson Logan are in the background.

Then, the garden wall was examined by E. L. Robert, chief engineer of The Colony to see if it could be knocked down, for the Rolls-Royces with Nelson Logan, Ledyard Gardner, general manager of The Colony Hotel, Mrs. Ralph Sleicher and children, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Foster looking on.

Kathleen Low, well-known fashion authority, who acted as commentator for the "International Dateline Fashions" is shown here with Jack Blackwood (left) and Roger Cra'ster of Rolls-Royce Ltd.

Will Taylor, president of Taylor Imported Motors, seems to enjoy telling Mrs. I. Gelder and Miss Gwen Fearing about the fabulous Rolls-Royce as they look over W. C. Findlay's new Rolls convertible.

So the party got underway. Pictured here are host S. Joseph Tankoos Jr., with the honored guests, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gropper of New York.

Preparations, ironically, for the Rolls presentation began on February twenty-second when the wall came tumbling down, under the supervision of The Colony's General Manager, L. D. Gardner. George Washington may have had his cherry tree, but Joe Tankoos had his garden wall! It was not easy, and probably few people would have gone to such extremes, but the achieved effect was most gratifying.

Reflected in the soft lights of The Colony pool, through the courtesy of Taylor Imported Motors, stood a grey and black Rolls, Wallstein Findlay's new white Rolls-Royce Convertible (loaned for the occasion), and a long sleek black Rolls, making a perfect background for the Rolls-Royce presentation of "International Dateline Fashions."

About three hundred guests and members of the press viewed the most elegant of evening furs from twenty of the top Palm Beach shops. Miss Kathleen Low, well-known fashion authority, presented the clothes, herself stunningly gowned in a J. J. Jonas flowered chiffon.

Each ensemble was selected for its appropriateness to a particular Rolls-Royce, in color and styling. The Rolls-Royce never looked more beautiful, nor the gowns more enchanting.

As many guests nibbled on deliciously designed delicacies from a table replete with two handsome, two-foot high ICE candelabras, designed especially for the occasion, music played for dancing. The overall atmosphere of this beautifully staged party was one of great gayety and fun. Old acquaintances were renewed and all enjoyed sitting in, and being photographed with a Rolls-Royce. Wally Findlay's new convertible really took the limelight, and he seemed delighted with his new present.

How did Messrs. Rolls-Royce enjoy the party? They loved it because it is understood that two of them acquired owners.

It just shows what can happen when two great names get together. Colony Hotel and Rolls-Royce! "The party that brought the house down" will certainly be long remembered in Palm Beach party history, as one of the most unique and fun affairs ever given, or attended.

On hand to greet the guests with host, Joseph Tankoos, president of the Colony Hotel, were Will Taylor, president of Taylor Imported Motors; Roger Cra'ster, Rolls-Royce Ltd. Export Director; Richard Yorke, Vice President, Rolls-Royce Inc., New York, and Raymond Salisbury-Jones of the Rolls-Royce sales promotion division, who flew to Palm Beach for this special event.

Among those noted at the party were: Mr. and Mrs. Granville Barclay, Mr. and

THE COLONY HOTEL

CHARMING AND INTERESTING people make up the scene at the Colony Hotel. Two making their first visit to Palm Beach were South American Countess Felipe de la Balze and French restaurant king, Claude Terrail.

Countess de la Balze is the great granddaughter of the George Washington of South America, General Urquiza who was the first President of Argentina and authored their constitution. Her grandfather was the Minister of War, General Luis Campo, and her father is General Luis Campos Urquiza, uniting two historic names.

The Countess had previously visited in Russia for a one-month exploratory tour. She found the country so depressing that it was then that she decided to visit Palm Beach.

She found the Colony Hotel as pleasing as her other homes away from home, Claridge's in London, the Plaza Athenee in Paris and the St. Regis in New York City, a tour she makes annually. In fact, she described her Palm Beach experience as ideal. "It is distinguished; it has tranquility when one wishes, and amusement always, too."

The Countess is president of the National Institute of Research for the hospitals in Argentina, and is prominentally featured on best-dressed lists in South America. M. Terrail is the 'proprietaire' of France's oldest and best-known restaurant, Tour d'Argent in Paris. He arrived in Palm Beach with Odile and Porfirio Rubirosa from the Dominican Republic where he and Rubi had been playing polo.

Tour d'Argent was established by the Terrail family in 1582. Their world-famous custom of numbering each duck, their specialty, began in 1890 and to-date, they have served over 300,000.

Tour d'Argent (tower of silver, or perhaps more literally, tower of money) is equally known for its spectacular view of Paris.

Academy Royale Theatre Will Present Original Plays During April

By ROBERT LARKIN

The Academy Royale Theatre Inc., of Palm Beach, will present two original full-length plays, written by Academy members, in April. "The Overreachers" by G. F. Reidenbaugh and "The Loft" by Al Brenner will be produced, directed, designed and acted by Academy members.

The Academy which began its present session in November, presented "Noah" and "Night must Fall" during January, before the opening of the Royal Poinciana Playhouse. The April productions will be the first member-written plays to be presented since the Academy's inception in 1957.

Founded by Frank J. Hale, Royal Poinciana Playhouse president, the Academy Royale Theatre Inc. is a non-profit organization which is unique in its goal of bridging the gap between academic and professional theatre for talented young writers, directors, designers, technicians and actors.

The "blue print" for the present Academy was decided upon at a meeting in September, 1959, when thirty representatives of the professional theatre, academic theatre and the theatrical unions convened in Palm Beach.

Representing professional theatre were Nina Vance, director of the Alley Theatre in Houston, Texas; Newell Tarrant, director of the Erie Playhouse; James M. Riley, art director of the Royal Poinciana Playhouse; Robert Porterfield, producer of the Barter Theatre of Virginia; Norris Houghton, Broadway producer and director.

Academic theatre was represented by John Conway, technical director of the University of Washington Drama Department; Mary Virginia Heinlein, chairman of Vassar College Drama Department; B. M. Hobgood, professor of Drama, Cawtaba College; Delmar Solem, chairman of Drama Department, University of Miami; and F. Cowles Strinkland, professor of Drama, Stanford University.

Frank J. Hale, founder and president of the Academy Royale Theatre Inc.

Union representatives were Jack Ferentz, assistant to the President, American Federation of Musicians; Virginia Payne, president of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists; Robert R. Paddock, president of United Scenic Artists; John Effrat, recording secretary of Actors Equity; Philip Dunning, special representative of International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

Professor Sawyer Falk, director of Dramatic Activities at Syracuse University, Vice President of the American National Theatre Conference acted as general chairman of the initial symposium.

The members of the Academy were selected by the members of the board and noted theatre professionals. Over five hundred applications were received for membership in the 1960-61 session and sixteen members were selected.

These members receive scholarships which cover all costs including room and board and transportation to and from Palm Beach.

The Academy utilizes a system of daily symposiums rather than an academic schedule, and affords its members the opportunity of discussing theatre and working with the theatrical luminaries who appear at the Royal Poinciana Playhouse.

Dore Schary, the noted playright-director-producer conducted a symposium early in the present session. Thornton Wilder, in Palm Beach for the premiere of the Theatre Guild American Repertory Company's production of "The Skin Of Our Teeth," conducted another symposium. Dr. Luigi Sarzano, public affairs program advisor for the U.S. Information Service in Turin, Italy and Dr. Herbert Heinrich Graf, program assistant in the U.S. Information Service in Bonn, Germany spent a week at the Academy conducting symposiums to evaluate the relative aims of American, Italian and German theatre.

Helen Menken, who appeared in "The Skin Of Our Teeth," showed great interest in the Academy during her Palm Beach stay as did Helen Hayes who is a member of the advisory board.

Ron Hefler and Rick Seger, set designers, confer with playwrights G. L. Reidenbaugh and Al Brenner and technician Joe Poc regarding the two original plays which the Academy Royale will present in April.

During the Theatre Guild American Repertory Company's five week stay at the Royal Poinciana Playhouse, George Guidall, an Academy member, was signed by Lawrence Langner of the Theatre Guild to join the company for their tour of Europe.

Other artists with whom Academy members have met and worked during the season are William Gibson, author of "The Miracle Worker," Tennessee Williams, Porter Van Zandt, Mesrop Kesdekian and George Keathley, Theatre Guild directors, June Havoc, Leif Erickson, Arlene Dahl, Russell Nype, Walter Slezak, David Wayne, Nancy Olson, and Arlene Francis.

Academy members William Tost, John Owens, Judith Carter, Eileen Shapiro, George Guidall and Doreen Kay have appeared in Royal Poinciana Playhouse productions during the season. Ron Hefler and Rick Segar who designed the settings for the January Academy productions were also active in creating the sets for the Playhouse productions of "Roman Candle" and "Old Acquaintance." Joe Poc, a technician, has worked on sound, lighting and stage-managing for all the Academy and Playhouse productions of the current season. Russ Letourneau, a director-member, has acted as assistant to each director at the Playhouse this season and staged the Academy production of "Night Must Fall." Ed Gould, another director-member, directed the Academy production of "Noah."

The two playwrights have utilized all their time this session, except for symposiums, to complete their plays. G. F. Reidenbaugh, author of "The Overreachers," is assistant professor of Drama at Syracuse University. Al Brenner, who wrote "The Loft" is a graduate of the Yale School of Drama.

Although this year sees the first productions of original plays, last season the Academy presented the first American full-length classical ballet, "The Princess."

Veronica Kusmin, a coloratura soprano who is in Europe on an Academy scholarship, has appeared in concert in France, on television in Paris and London this season, will star in "The Merry Widow" in Vienna in the Spring and has been offered the leading role in the planned London production of Offenbach's "La Vie Parisienne."

Founder Frank J. Hale is president of Academy Royale Theatre Inc., and Paul Crabtree, Royal Poinciana Playhouse producing-director is vice-president and director. Professor Sawyer Falk is consulting director. The Baroness George de Grippenberg is Secretary-treasurer.

The board of advisors includes such theatrical luminaries as Helen Hayes, Shirley Booth, Robert Cummings, Billie Burke, and Norris Houghton.

The current session concludes on May first, 1961.

Influence of Turkey Seen in Sharp's Oils

By EMILIE KEYES

To an art heritage stemming from a widely diversified background for both work and play, John Sharp has now added a hint of influences from recent Mediterranean travels from Spain to Turkey.

A native of Galesburg, Ill., who studied both in Iowa and New York City, Mr. Sharp has long been associated with art colonies in New Hope, Pa., and more recently Nantucket, Mass., in Summer, and Palm Beach in Winter.

The earthy quality of the Midwest, especially the influence on his technique of his studies with Grant Wood; the starkness of New England, the warmth and color of Nantucket and Florida beaches; the lush colors of the tropics and of Italy, where he studied and painted in 1954-55, have all found their way into Sharp paintings.

Tribute to his work is found in the fact that he is included in numerous public and private collections, has had one-man shows in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Des Moines, Nantucket, and at the Worth Avenue Gallery in Palm Beach; that he has been on the Norton School of Art staff for the past two years, and numbers many of Palm Beach's socialite neophyte artists among his pupils.

In his travels last Fall, Mr. Sharp came under the spell of the warm Mediterranean countries, the antiquity and the art of Spain, Greece, Egypt. Probably sub-consciously, a series of religious paintings of well-known saints executed in modern primitive style, with figures almost dwarfed by creatures of the out-doors and lush colors pointing up the stylized designs, stemmed from the religious nature of much of what he saw.

From the Greek Orthodox Church came the inspiration for a striking and very handsome painting, "The Last Supper," in which a composition of bread, wine and white radishes, used in this church, are formed into one of Mr. Sharp's finest still lifes, both in brush work and in color.

"THE LAST SUPPER"

"ST. FRANCIS FEEDING THE BIRDS"

Among Mr. Sharp's recent works are to be found an unusual, interesting type of wood panel painting that has been acclaimed especially in Nantucket from which much of the subject matter was found. These are paintings on panels cut in fish design, and superimposed on larger panels. Beach scenes and creatures, fish, Nantucket's famed old houses, the flora and fauna of the island have all been used with decorative effect in this manner.

John Sharp paintings are to be found in the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the Dubuque Art Museum, the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the Philadelphia Museum, the Museum of Fine Arts of Dallas, the Joselyn Museum of Omaha, Neb., and the Norton Gallery in West Palm Beach.

PALM BEACH TOWERS

With each year exceeding the previous, The Palm Beach Towers is enjoying a high, wide and happy-go-luxury season. Unmatched as the Winter capitol of Palm Beach, The Towers is greeting guests from all parts of the world.

Arriving from Paris, was Senor Alejo Vidal-Quadras and his French film star wife, Tilda Thamar, on a return visit to Palm Beach Towers. Established as one of the masters of the young generation by Spanish critics, this talented artist was commissioned by Onassis to paint Maria Callas. He was so delighted with the portrait he insisted Alejo paint the Onassis parents which delayed the artist's trip to America. Last year he painted a number of prominent Palm Beachers including Nonie and Michael Phipps, Bernard Gimbel, Mrs. Earl E. T. Smith and Nathan Cummings of The Towers. He has also painted Princess Grace and children, Prince Rainier, The Duchess of Windsor, Vicontesse deRives and children, Mrs. Patrick Guiness, Princess Ann of Denmark, His Royal Highness Don Alfonso of Spain and many other well-knowns. There was an exhibit at the Palm Beach Galleries on March fifteenth of his portraits and other paintings he brought from Paris arranged by George E. Vigouroux Jr., of Palm Beach.

Luigi Sarzano of Turin, Italy, a playwright and critic, and Herbert H. Graf of Bad Godesberg, Germany, arrived at Palm Beach Towers sponsored by Frank Hale and Paul Crabtree of the Royal Poinciana Playhouse. They are touring for the United States Information Agency to gather fresh ideas on the American way of life in a public relations capacity in the interest of international culture and good will in their respective countries. Before returning to Europe on April fifteenth they will visit all the major cities in the United States.

Georgia Gibbs made The Towers her home also while appearing at the Celebrity Room.

A shocking pink fox fur collar to match her three piece suit marked the arrival of Jayne Mansfield with her "Mr. America" husband, Mickey Hargitay, sojourning from California to do a television show with Jackie Gleason.

Sid Luft, husband of Judy Garland, arrived at The Towers to visit with his friend, Bob Neal, owner of the yacht Bagatelle, while Judy Garland was in Texas doing concerts.

Senor Alejo Valid-Quadras and his French film star wife, Tilda Thamar, who are spending a good part of the season at Palm Beach Towers, shown here in his Paris studio with one of his paintings which he does as well as being famous for his portraits.

Returning for their second visit of the season were Helen Menken, Thornton Wilder, Lawrence Langner and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Caro with their four-year-old daughter Kelly Caro, named after her mother, who is screen star Nancy Kelly.

President of the board of New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, George Alpert, was the weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Levien, permanent residents of The Towers. Another guest of theirs, William Zeckendorf, real estate tycoon of New York, after spending a day with Mr. Levien flew his own plane back to New York. Mr. Levien was the highest bidder at the American Cancer Society Benefit held at the Celebrity Room, offering $8,000 for the commission of famous artist Channing Hare to do a portrait of Mrs. Levien.

Stage, screen and television star David Wayne resided at The Towers with his wife and three children, twins Melinda and Susan and Timothy. Mr. Wayne appeared in the production "Send Me No Flowers" at The Playhouse.

Impressed with the Olympic sized pool at The Towers Cabana Club were guests Mr. and Mrs. Jack Egan of Ridgewood, N. J., and their two daughters Nona and Diane. Mr. Egan is a coach at the New York Athletic Club and a member of the United States Olympics for many years. Taking after her father, who is a champion swimmer, Diane is a synchronized swimmer while Nona is a student of Frank Hale's Academy Royale.

These are a few of the colorful personalities, socialites and world travelers who make Palm Beach Towers their home while in Palm Beach.

The Poinciana Room has continued its popularity and is a constant setting for dinner parties, with dancing to Meyer Davis' music under the direction of Paul Sparr.

The Keyboard Room, adjoining the Poinciana Room, is enjoying a popularity of its own. Much of the attraction of this Room is also due to pianist Peter Walters.

Maurice Rosenfeld Honored

Maurice Rosenfeld, long-time Winter resident of Palm Beach and prominently identified with New York City officialdom for years, was honored on his birthday anniversary at a Palm Beach Towers celebration during mid-February.

With him for the celebration was Mrs. Rosenfeld and their family and grandchildren.

Mr. Rosenfeld has the distinction of having been six times president of the Youth Council Bureau of the five district attorneys' offices of New York City, honorary deputy police commissioner there since 1947, and member of the Saratoga Springs Authority under three governors. His last appointment to that post came from Governor Nelson Rockefeller.

President of the Equitable Paper Bag Co., Inc., of Long Island City, N. Y., Mr. Rosenfeld also is treasurer of the Orange Pulp & Paper Mills, Orange, Texas.

Awarded the first bronze plaque award of the Police Coordinating Councils he is responsible for the recreational activities of the five boroughs of the New York City Police Department.

He masterminds the New York City Parks Department boxing tournaments for teenagers, starting such activity in 1951. For his work he received a scroll from Parks Commissioner Robert Moses in behalf of the youth.

He is a member of the board of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency and member of a number of child welfare agencies.

He is a trustee-at-large as well as honorary trustee for life of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, one of the largest philanthrophies in the world, serving over 116 organizations.

As a 'glorious champion of the youngster," he was selected as the "man of the year" in 1960 by Yeshiva of Crown Heights (New York City).

He has been a special representative of the U.S. State Department, representing the United States at the International Film Festival, Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1954.

Congregation Emanu-El is having a plaque placed on its roof-top playground in honor of the Rosenfelds and their children for work he has done with youth in New York City.

In 1959, he was appointed by President Eisenhower as an assay commissioner to serve as a member of the annual assay commission.

"Your intensive interest and indefatigable labors on behalf of the youth of this city (New York City) of all races, colors and creeds are well recognized," wrote Police Commissioner Stephen P. Kennedy in designating Mr. Rosenfeld as liaison officer between the Youth Council Bureau of the District Attorneys and the Youth Division of the Police Department.

In recounting his civic activities, Commissioner Kennedy wrote these labors "have exemplified the great citizen you are of this great democracy."

The Rosenfelds are members of the Palm Beach Country Club and in the North, the Harmonie Club of New York City and the Beach Point Club at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Southern Tip of Florida Again Beckoning Anglers

Flamingo Park, on the southern tip of Florida, is once again beckoning to the fisherman.

Just south of the marina and motel at Flamingo, lies one of the most distinctively beautiful fishing spots in the world. Out in Florida Bay, a section of fishing territory that was not too populated by the genus fisherman prior to the Flamingo's opening in 1957, the grass flats just offshore are studded with a lacy quilt-work of trees, roots, and logs, denuded of foliage by the passage of time and quirks of nature.

These mangrove and black mahogany trees, though no longer rich in greenery like their neighbors that line the shore of Cape Sable, just a few hundred yards away, nonetheless provide a richness to the fisherman that the other trees can only dream about.

Nestled around the roots of these stark but beautiful derelicts, are thousands of the finest game fish specimens that can be lured by hook and line. Feeding on the green grass of the flats, and the biological life that clings to the roots of the trees are tarpon, permit fish, snapper, red fish, sea bass, snook, grouper, kingfish, amberjack, wahoo, barracuda, jewfish, and pan fish of all sizes and descriptions.

For many years this area was a relatively safe haven for these finny citizens, as most fishing activity in the Florida Keys was centered around the Gulf Stream, south of the main Key chain. But with the opening of Flamingo Park, this area is practically in the back-yard of the new marina, and both rental outboards from Flamingo and the buzz-buggies of the fishermen who prefer to bring their own are poking around the grass flats and gnarled trees and roots, bringing in tremendous catches.

In February, the biggest catches were made with the hard striking kingfish, a tasty kin to the mackerel. Kingfish have been caught both by bottom fishing and trolling, mostly with live shrimp.

Mangrove snapper, perhaps one of the tastiest morsels ever to grace a frying pan, also should be abundant. This fish, fried in deep fat with salt, pepper, and ground meal, has a brilliant white meat with a slightly sweet taste, and is a prize catch in this region.

This shallow water Florida Bay country is also being explored by skin divers, in search of their favorite prey, the jewfish. But this particular section of Florida Bay is best suited to fishermen in small boats, mainly because of the shallowness of the water. Skin divers rarely find a deep enough section to encounter any large jewfish, such as the 300-400 pound monsters that roam the deeper waters near the Gulf Stream.

Spin casters find the region even more challenging than most to their angling ability. With thousands of roots in which to hide once hooked, a fish has a fighting chance to evade the gloomy prospect of furnishing an evening's meal by darting in and out the woody passage-ways and snapping the monofiliament line of an inexperienced spin caster.

But the challenge, plus the abundant supply of fish and the now easy accessibility from Flamingo, have made this fabulously beautiful fishing and boating region a new haven for outdoorsmen from all over the nation.

The gaunt, still trees in Florida Bay make an impressive picture for fishermen angling near Flamingo and Cape Sable.

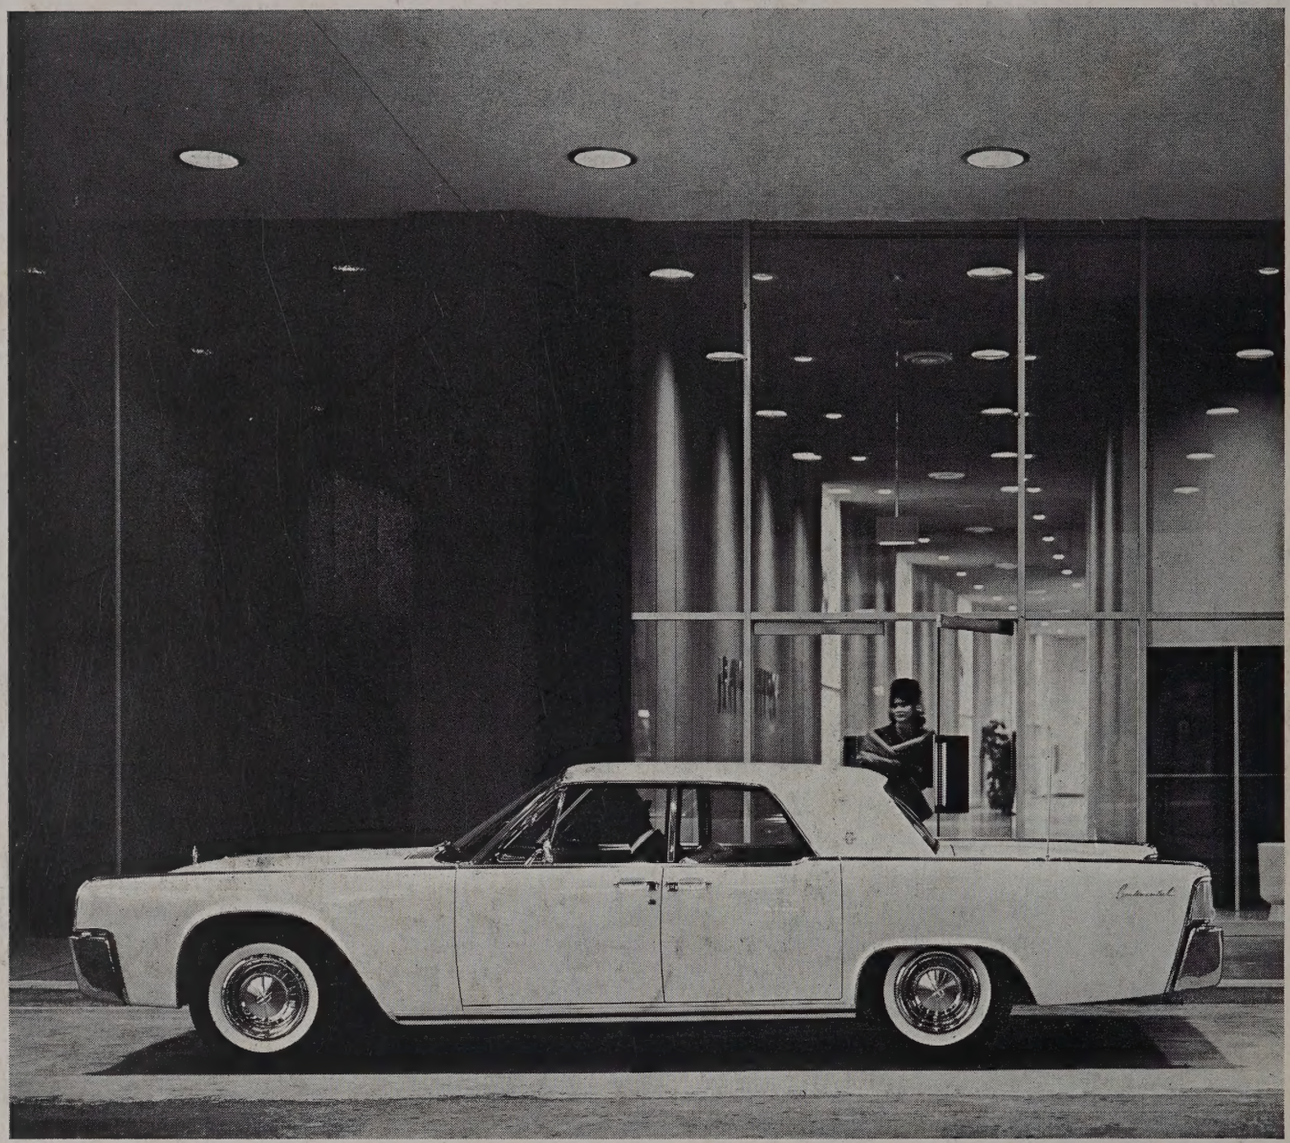
OWNED AND OPERATED BY HOTEL CORPORATION OF AMERICA



Pure elegance . . . with a two-year/ 24,000-mile pledge of excellence*

Now America has a new kind of fine car, one that provides even greater luxury and comfort in 14 inches less length. Specifically designed for today's close-packed traffic, the new Lincoln Continental is slimmer, easier to park and handle. But its greatest achievement is in standards of quality and reliability . . . standards so high that it, alone, among all American cars, can be warranted for two full years or 24,000 miles.

There are so many other pleasures to discover: Doors that open at the centerline for unusual ease of entrance. Contour-zoned seats cushioned with nearly twice the usual amount of foam rubber. The first hydraulic windshield wipers, silent and 50 percent more powerful. This country's only four-door convertible. America's largest V-8 engine—and biggest brakes.

This car is so advanced in design and durability it will keep right on revealing new virtues mile after velvet mile—but isn't that just the enduring kind of automobile you've wanted?

LINCOLN-MERCURY DIVISION Ford Motor Company

*Ford Motor Company warrants to its dealers, and its dealers, in turn, warrant to their Lincoln Continental customers as follows: That for 24 months or 24,000 miles, whichever comes first, free replacement, including related labor, will be made by dealers, of any part with a defect in workmanship or materials. Tires are not covered by the warranty: appropriate adjustments will continue to be made by the tire companies. Owners will remain responsible for normal maintenance service and routine replacement of maintenance items such as filters, spark plugs, ignition points and wiper blades.
